State Dept. Postpones Civilian Rule For Germany

Claims It Lacks Staff, Facilities To Replace Army As Administrator

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The long-planned changeover from Army to civilian rule in occupied Germany has been "indefinitely postponed," the State Department announced last night.

Press Officer Michael J. McDermott explained that the department simply did not have the personnel or other facilities needed to administer the American zone in Germany. He said the present world situation had nothing to do with the decision.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American commander in Germany, intends to fly back to his post this morning after two weeks in Washington. Clay and his political adviser, Robert D. Murphy, have been taking part in Anglo-American discussions here concerned with taking over the British dollar costs in Germany.

Seen As Boon to Clay

The timing of last night's announcement suggested that the Administration was anxious to reaffirm Clay's continuing administrative authority in Germany in the eyes of the British, French and Germans with whom he has to deal.

Officers close to Clay are said to feel that his authority has been weakened in foreigners' eyes by events of the last few months. He has been overruled repeatedly on major issues by civilian policy-makers in the Government, especially in the State Department.

Last Summer he was on the point of releasing a plan for permitting higher levels of industry for western Germany. The French Ambassador protested, and Clay was overruled temporarily by Secretary Marshall. The new plan was not issued until there had been consultations with the French in London.

Objected to Ruhr Tacks

Similarly Clay was reported to have objected to last August's Anglo-American conference in Washington on Ruhr coal production. He declined to attend it himself, but the conference was held without him, and he later accepted its recommendations.

It also was reported that Clay objected, for a time, to making the resources of the American zone available to the rest of Western Europe under the Marshall Plan.

Police Gaming Link Probed In Arlington

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A six-man Arlington County grand jury yesterday launched a probe into "very serious rumors" of possible police collusion with gamblers.

The probe, direct outgrowth of a raid made last week by police officials on an affidavit furnished by a former county policeman, had been requested by Arlington County Board member Daniel A. Dugan.

Dugan, in a letter to Judge Walter T. McCarthy, had said that "very serious charges" had been made to him in connection with what he termed the "failure or refusal" of police officials to locate and arrest gamblers.

Yesterday, the grand jury, which was opening the fall term of Circuit Court, heard Dugan's testimony in its customary secret session, then produced a list of 14 witnesses it expects to call in the course of its investigation.

The grand jury will meet again on Thursday morning, after a two-day recess requested by Foreman Erle Kirby, Arlington automobile dealer, who must be out of the State on urgent business.

The list of witnesses is:

Pneumonia Kills D. C. Victim

Two Men Jailed as Drunks Die in Area Police Cells

Fractured Skull Caused Death of Victim in Bethesda

A 31-year-old Glen Echo, Md., man, jailed earlier in the day on a drunk charge, was found dead in his cell in the Bethesda jail yesterday afternoon.

The man, identified by Montgomery County police as John J. Pies, 6207 Wagner lane, was pronounced dead at 3:57 p. m. by Dr. Paul D. Cantor. The doctor was called from his office at 7425 Wisconsin ave. after Pies was found unconscious on the floor of his cell.

Pies was arrested about 9:20 a. m. after being found lying in an alley behind the Wayside Market, Wisconsin ave. and Walsh st. Police took him to Suburban Hospital before locking him up and he was examined by Dr. John Fawset. The doctor released the man after the examination.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County Medical Examiner, after performing an autopsy, issued a certificate of accidental death due to a fractured skull. He said that Pies "had apparently fallen," but did not express an opinion as to where the fall might have taken place.

Police said that cell had been checked "several times" between 9:45 a. m. when Pies was placed in it and the time when he was found slumped on the floor at about 3:45 p. m. They said that he had appeared in a "sort of stupor" earlier.

Dr. Fawcett said that he gave Pies "more than a superficial examination" when he was brought

Friends Pleaded To Hospitalize Man On '3-Week Binge'

Despite two advance pleas to police to hospitalize a man, he died Sunday night in a First Precinct police cell without medical attention.

Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg yesterday attributed the death of the 39-year-old part-time mechanic and painter to pneumonia, following an autopsy at the District Morgue.

The victim was identified as Charles Emmitt Reynolds, alias Charles Kermit Chapman, who roomed at 728 5th st. nw. He was found unconscious in his cell at 10 p. m. Sunday, and pronounced dead on the scene a half hour later by a doctor from Casualty Hospital.

Though police say the prisoner, arrested Saturday afternoon on an intoxication charge, never complained of feeling ill and never asked for medical attention, a friend said he twice asked police Sunday to hospitalize Reynolds.

And, on Friday night, before Reynolds' arrest, the friend's wife

Capital Transit Seeks Another Fare Increase

15 Cent Probable Figure To Be Asked, Official Announces

The Capital Transit Co. intends to ask for another fare increase. This was divulged yesterday by J. Edward Heberle, vice president and controller of the utility, at arbitration hearings on union-management contract issues.

Heberle said the fare boost would be sought after the arbitration panel, which concludes its hearings today, issues its award. Regardless of the board's action, he said, the hike will be asked of the Public Utilities Commission—probably for a cash fare of 15 cents or two rides for a quarter.

Claims Debt Reduced

Later, Eli Oliver, counsel for AFL employes of the company, told the panel the CTC had reduced its debt by some 4½ million dollars in the past three years, from $15,477,000 to $10,937,000.

Instead of distributing profits, the company increased the equity of the property to the stockholders, Oliver said. A company spokesman said that a major portion of the debt reduction was made possible by a substantial tax refund.

In revealing the pending move for a fare boost, at the resumption of arbitration hearings in Hotel Raleigh, Vice President Herberle declared:

"This is a very disturbing thing, as 10 cents has been considered the top for transit fares."

"Could Not Live on Less"

He later told reporters that "we could not live on less" than an increase to 15 cents but declined to state flatly that a 15 cents fare would be sought.

Need for the proposed rate hike was attributed to a decline in passengers. If "traffic continues to fall, this is absolutely the only answer," Heberle said. He said the current decline is "at the rate of 7½ per cent."

Heberle submitted exhibits designed to show a persistent decline in revenue despite fare increases granted by the PUC in May. At that time, the token system was abolished, installing a 10-cent cash fare for all rides, and the price

200 Religious Leaders Back Chest Drive

Luncheon Group Told Funds Must Be Raised To Relieve Suffering

Almost 200 Washington religious leaders yesterday pledged their support of the forthcoming Community Chest Federation drive for $3,900,000.

Attending a pre-campaign luncheon at the YWCA, the clerics heard addresses by Edward H. Foley, jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Msgr. John J. Russell, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, and Edward J. Keyes, executive director of the Community Chest Federation.

"We have people to save and we have a job to do," Foley said. "The thing I like about this Community Chest is that it is the most democratic agency I know here . . . it's non-political, non-sectarian and non-discriminatory.

Msgr. Russell pointed out that "funds must be raised to relieve human misery, human suffering, human pain." He asked:

"How can you say that you love God, whom you do not see, if you do not love your neighbor, whom you do see?" And he added:

"We are rich only by what we give and poor only through what we refuse and keep for ourselves. . . ."

Said Keyes:

"We are meeting in a community enterprise. Every community enterprise needs the support of the clergy of that community."

England Is Left $6000 Estate By Bricklayer

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP).—A bricklayer who came to this country after a long steerage voyage from Liverpool, England, has left $6000 to his native land because she needs "her friends and help more than ever now."

The bequest was contained in the will of Sam Smith, who died here last March at the age of 84 years. His widow, who had known of her husband's intentions, agreed with the purpose entirely.

Henry Mann, attorney for Smith, related that he was "most specific" and said the "money must go to Great Britain" and not "the dominions or the colonies."

'Sovereign or Slave'

Snyder Sees Fate of Mankind At Stake in U. S. Actions

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said tonight that "whether modern man is to be sovereign or slave depends to a grave extent on what we do here on this side of the Atlantic."

Snyder discussed foreign aid at the New York Herald-Tribune Forum. He said:

"To attain . . . assured peace and stability, much depends upon the skill and wisdom with which we approach imminent problems.

"Mankind—in far too many places—is hungry. We can and must help, for hunger is no ally of freedom.

"The economic machinery of the world is stalled and damaged as a result of war. The machinery must be repaired and started again.

"We have tools and parts. We have what is just as important—the 'know-how.' Tools and parts are not sufficient in themselves. They may be wasted—thrown away—without the proper guidance. And we have no time to be either reckless or wasteful.

"We can supply that 'know-how' and that guidance to make effective the aid we provide."

In a talk on Washington, D. C., the "voteless city," Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, said the dependency of the residents of the District upon the Federal Government "exceeds by far that of the people of Guam, Puerto Rico or Samoa." (Mr. Graham's text appears on page 4.)

Deeds Go to High Court

Hearing on D. C. Property Issue May Result in Validity Ruling

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Two attacks on deeds which bar Negroes from houses in white areas here were set yesterday for hearing in the Supreme Court December 8.

A far-reaching statement of public policy may come out of the hearing. The District cases are part of a series in which—for the first time—the court may say whether or not such deeds may be enforced in this country.

Already before the court are other suits of the same sort, over city lots in St. Louis and in Detroit. The court may hear, too, a fifth case, from Columbus, Ohio, and two others, from Los Angeles.

There are 31 houses in the 100 block of Bryant st. nw., all on the south side of the street, facing a park. Eleven of them have been owned and used by Negroes for more than 20 years. The other 20 are under a covenant, which says they shall not be rented or sold to Negroes, under a penalty of $2000 for doing so.

Sales Attacked

Francis X. Ryan and his wife—who have taken no part on the lawsuits—sold 116 Bryant st. to James M. Hurd and his wife in 1945. Raphael G. Urciolo, a realty man, owned six of the houses. In 1945 he sold No. 118 to Robert H. Rowe and his wife, No. 134 to Herpersons."

These sales were attacked by bert E. Savage and his wife, and No. 150 to Pauline B. Stewart. The District Court found all the buyers to be "Negroes or colored the owners of four other houses in the block—Frederick E. Hodge, 136 Bryant st.; Pasquale De Rita, 128 Bryant st.; Constantino Marchegiani, 6415 Colesville rd., and Balduino Giancola, 130 Bryant st.

These owners asked the District Court to hold the sales to their new neighbors void, and to order them to move out. Justice F. Dickinson Letts ruled in their favor.

However, the order was stayed by appeal, and the new owners have been living in their houses since they bought them. One of their lawyers, Charles H. Houston, said yesterday that he would point out to the Supreme Court that the white owners testified there had been no trouble at all.

Ruling Upheld

The Letts ruling was upheld by Justices Bennett C. Clark and Wilbur K. Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals here, but Justice Henry W. Edgerton filed a strong dissent.

Clark said for the majority that anti-Negro clauses in deeds are good, under the settled District law and that the courts here have upheld them many times. Clark said most such clauses bar Negroes for a term of years, but that it made no difference that the deeds bar Negroes from the 20 houses on Bryant st. forever; the Bryant st. deeds are good and the courts must enforce them.

Edgerton said he found seven reasons for striking down the anti-Negro clauses, and refusing to enforce them:

1. They take property without due process of law, and so are against the Constitution.

2. They violate the Civil Rights Act, which says "all citizens of

French Reds End Subway, Bus Strikes

Paris, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Communist leaders called off their weekend subway and bus strikes today after the French army alerted troops in the capital, and appealed instead for the Socialist Party to join them to help stop Gen. Charles De Gaulle's victorious anti-Communist movement, the Union of French People.

"Our two parties still group more than half the electoral body and if the Socialists and Communists unite they can still play a decisive role in French politics," said a Communist statement.

Observers believed the Socialists would reject the appeal.

The transport strike was canceled when Communists failed to budge the government with a threat of a general strike.

Earlier the government rushed troops to the capital.

Clay's Reich Role Was 'News' To Roosevelt, Byrnes Says

This is a serialization of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly"—six of fifteen chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Brothers. Copyright, 1947, by James F. Byrnes Foundation (A Charitable Trust).

BY MID-MARCH we had established a foothold on the east bank of the Rhine and had received word from Field Marshal Alexander that high German officers had proposed a meeting in Switzerland to arrange for the surrender of the German army in Italy.

Consequently, when we started moving across the Rhine in force on March 23, I concluded it was wrong to postpone action any further, and the following day I presented to the President a letter of resignation, asking that it become effective April 2. I fixed that date because the law required the filing of a quarterly report with the President and Congress on April 1, and necessarily I had to submit that report.

When the President tried to persuade me to remain, I reminded him of his promise the previous fall that with the end of the war in Europe I could leave. I told him that I had left the court only to undertake a wartime task; that I did not want to become the head of an agency or bureau in time of peace. I convinced him that the man who was going to direct the reconversion program should be given an opportunity to share in drafting that program, and it was essential, therefore, that the change be made.

We discussed many things, including the plans for the occupation of Germany. He understood the War Department was planning to send Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy to Germany to head our organization. I informed him McCloy had decided to remain with Secretary Stimson and that my deputy, General Clay, had been selected by the War Department for the assignment.

TO MY SURPRISE, he did not know General Clay. I told him I had obtained his assignment to my office because, after dealing with officials of all the departments, I had found no man more capable than Clay, and no Army officer who had as clear an understanding of the point of view of the civilian.

The President remarked that I was unusually enthusiastic about Clay and asked that I bring him in for a talk. The President was leaving that day for Hyde Park but would be spending a day in Washington the following week en route to Warm Springs. We agreed the three of us would get together that day.

Asked to Reconsider

Shortly after the President arrived in Hyde Park he telephoned me to ask that I reconsider my resignation, and then, when I did

Interim Aid Essential to Avert Europe Collapse, Meyer Says

Unless the United States sends adequate interim aid to western Europe "conditions will deteriorate with catastrophic speed."

This blunt warning was voiced last night before the District of Columbia Bankers Association fall meeting by Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post.

"The Marshall Plan, or a Marshall plan of some sort, is the answer to the problem of aid to Europe," he said, "but it can't be done in a hurry." If interim aid is not promptly forthcoming, a Marshall Plan program will "be too little and too late."

Meyer, former president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, drew a grim picture of the outlook as he observed it on a recent trip abroad.

Supporting the Marshall Plan as an unavoidable and necessary risk, Meyer declined to assert it would work. He acknowledged the risks, but he emphasized that "if we do not enable western Europe to escape wholesale starvation and freezing, then the worst will happen.

"And it will be for keeps," he declared.

"If we don't save them, we will lose all we fought for . . . and we will not have another chance."

He saw as "an immediate way we can act" the methods proposed by the Citizens Food Committee—"voluntary self-rationing."

The bankers, in their dinner meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, heard warnings of the "Hydra-headed problem of inflation" from M. S. Szymczak, member of the Federal Reserve System's board of governors.

Asserting that some of the Nation's banks are "riding the crest of the inflationary tide," Szymczak

Poultryless Day Continues As Talks Fail

By John Ball
Post Reporter

Efforts of poultry raisers and manufacturers of poultry feeds to get President Truman's Citizens Food Committee to call off poultryless Thursdays failed last night after day-long negotiations.

Another meeting with Charles Luckman, chairman of the food group, may be held today, although the temper of the conferees when the long session ended last night, did not assure a renewal of negotiations.

The stalemate developed during a day that saw another wild upsurge in the wheat market. December wheat hit $3.07 a bushel—up almost seven cents over the Saturday close.

It was the highest price ever recorded for wheat for December delivery, and the highest for any future since 1917. Cash wheat set a 27-year record at $3.11.

Government grain experts, both here and in the field, expressed growing concern over the threat of dry weather in the great Southwestern winter wheat belt to next year's crop—a situaiton mostly responsible for yesterday's dizzy market.

Yesterday's prices compare with $3.05 set last March for March

More Airports for D. C. Area Recommended by CAA Chief

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Civil Aeronautics Administrator T. P. Wright yesterday recommended the construction of additional airports in the Washington area to relieve congestion at National Airport.

The latter field—built in the '30s as model for the Nation—now handles 106,005 passengers per month, Wright told the President's Air Policy Commission. Plane takeoffs and landings run 14,216 monthly—close to the saturation point, he added.

"Serious consideration on this matter should be given at once," Wright testified. "This involves need for an airport to serve non-scheduled users, and also several for private flying."

The CAA chief emphasized that segregation of types of traffic—scheduled, nonscheduled and private flying—at different airports was an essential to a proper solution of the problem as additional fields.

Wright reported that National Airport is "in a healthy financial condition" compared to other American airports. A small net surplus exists for the past three years as far as out-of-pocket expense is concerned, though operations are not "in the black" when interest payments and amortization of principal is included.

Additional funds are being requested in the CAA's 1949 budget for additional construction at the

Red Efforts To Subvert Via Screen Described

Producers Report Anti-Propaganda Gains; Wood Urges Party Be Outlawed

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Top Hollywood producers told Congress yesterday that Communists have been trying for years to use the motion pictures to put subversive propaganda across to millions of Americans every day.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities was told, however that in the main Hollywood's efforts to keep out the propaganda of Red Fascism have been successful, and that more care is being exercised now than ever before.

Sam Wood, veteran independent producer and director, termed Communists "agents of a foreign power," and called for the party to be outlawed in the United States."

Writing Main Field

He and Jack L. Warner, first vice president of Warner Brothers Pictures Corp., said the Communists had made their greatest efforts at infiltrating the industry in the field of screen writing.

A third producer, Louis B. Mayer, production chief of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, said he was proud of Hollywood's success in circumventing any attempts to use films for propaganda purposes.

The hearing in the white marble caucus room of the Old House Office building opened with all the fanfare of a minor Hollywood premier.

125 Reporters on Hand

Inside the hearing, started under a battery of kleig lights for motion picture cameras. Radio and television recorded the show and 125 reporters were on hand.

Mayer called upon the committee to recommend legislation which would aid private employers in denying jobs to Communists.

He told the committee, however, that he didn't know of any Communists employed by him.

He said that three screen writers on his payroll, Dalton Trumbo, Donald Ogden Stewart and Lester Cole had been termed Communists, but he had never seen any indication of it in their work.

Salaries Put in Record

The committee placed the salaries paid these three by M-G-M in the record.

They were:

Trumbo, 1943, $76,000; 1944, $39,000; 1945, $95,000; 1946, $71,000; 1947 to October 4, $35,000.

Cole, 1945: $33,491; 1946, $53,000; 1947 up to October 4, $43,000.

Stewart: 1943—$43,000; 1944—$27,000; 1946—$65,000; 1947 to October 4—$17,000. (No figure was given for 1945.)

Mayer explained this by no means represented the full salaries of these men since they also wrote for other film companies.

The M-G-M chief said he had not refused to hire these writers because the Communist charge had not been proved against them.

Cards Would Bar Them

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) interjected:

"Well, if you were shown the Communist Party cards of these men would you continue to employ them."

Mayer said he would not.

Wood, producer of "Saratoga Trunk," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "Kitty Foyle" and "For Whom the Bell Tolled," told of forming the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals.

He was asked about some of the writers. "I know positively that Dalton Trumbo and Donald Ogden Stewart are Communists," he said.

Refused Contract Renewals

Warner said he had refused to renew the contracts of a number of writers because of their un-American ideas."

He named:

Dalton Trumbo, John Howard Lawson, Ring Lardner, jr.; Clifford Odets, Gordon Kahn, Howard Koch, Erwin Shaw, Alvah Bessie, Emmett Lavery, Albert Maltz, Robert Rosson and John Wexley.

Warner, who had to be prodded into testifying by the reading of previous sworn statements he had

Britain Again Taps Her Gold Reserves

Exchange for U. S. Dollars Revealed On Eve of Parliament's Opening

London, Oct. 20 (AP).—Britain's Labor government announced tonight another $120,000,000 dip into the country's gold reserves on the eve of a new session of Parliament and in the midst of an economic crisis.

Announcement of sale of the gold to the United States in exchange for dollars was accompanied by disclosure that the Treasury had obtained an equal number of dollars through an exchange of sterling with the international monetary fund.

The sterling exchange was made yesterday while the gold was the total of sales over the last month, a Treasury announcement said.

The $240,000,000 total presumably represents for approximately a five-week period Britain's adverse balance of trade with the United States and other "hard currency" countries—the imports she is unable to pay for from proceeds of her exports.

$380,000,000 Drawn

Britain has drawn 380 million dollars from the emergency sources since the August 20 end of convertibility of sterling.

Meanwhile Labor government leaders put finishing touches today t oa new parliamentary program expected to be devoted largely to economic recovery.

Members of Parliament met briefly this afternoon to hear the prorogation speech of King George VI, in which he praised the United States for taking the initiative in promoting European economic recovery.

A new parliamentary session will be opened tomorrow by the King, who will personally announce the legislative program drawn up by Prime Minister Attlee, his cabinet and advisers.

Progress Reported

Today's address, written by the government and read by the Lord Chancellor, reported "substantial progress" toward economic reconstruction but warned of difficulties and further sacrifices ahead.

"My government have been fully aware that our own difficulties cannot be overcome except in conjunction with other governments," the King said. He added:

"They have, therefore, warmly welcomed the initiative of the United States in seeking to promote joint action by the governments of the European nations to increase production and extend international trade, and they have given this initiative their strongest backing."

He devoted a single sentence to the forthcoming marriage of Princess Elizabeth, heiresst presumptive:

"It is with very great pleasure that I have given my consent to the engagement of my beloved daughter, Princess Elizabeth, to Lt. Philip Mountbatten, R. N."

Government informants speculated that tomorrow's speech might call for restricting the powers of the predominantly conservative House of Lords to prevent "sabotage" of the Socialist program.

Princess Gets Own Throne in Commons

London, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth will take her place on the right hand of King George VI for the first time tomorrow when the King opens Parliament.

A third throne for Elizabeth has been placed in the House of Commons, signifying for the first time officially that Elizabeth is next in succession to the crown.

made before the committeee in closed session, said he had originally believed four other writers were in the same class but had since changed his mind.

Those he had changed his mind about, he said, are Guy Endore, Sheridan Gibney and Julius and Philip Epstein.

Warner and Wood agreed that the Communist Party should be outlawed.

Would Aid "Pest Fund"

Asserting that "My brothers and I will be happy to subscribe generously to a pest removal fund," Warner suggested that Communists be shipped to Russia.

Stumbling over the pronunciation of the words, which were in a prepared statement, Warner called Communists "ideological termites."

Warner drew the only laugh of the day when in answer to a long and involved question from Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) he said:

"Well, I agree with everything you say."

The dapper, mustached producer denied that he was pressured by White House influence into making "Mission to Moscow," film dramatization of a book by former Ambassador Joseph Davies.

He corrected testimony he had given in secret session that Davies asked his company to make the book. Instead, Warner testified, his brother asked Davies for the screen rights.

Squirming uncomfortably, Warner parried questions about what committee director Robert E. Stripling termed gross historical inaccuracies amounting to "fraud" in the film.

He had read some criticism of the movie, Warner testified.

One that he remembered was a letter to the New York Times written by "Professor Dewey of Columbia University."

He added, "but from what I read he was a Trotskyite, anyway."

"Do you mean Professor John Dewey?" (famed educator and philosopher) queried Stripling.

"Yes," said Warner.

White House Contacted?

Warner said he never was directly in touch with anyone at the White House in connection with "Mission to Moscow." He said he had understood from Davies that he had "contacted the White House."

Both Warner and Mayer had as counsel Paul V. McNutt, former head of the War Manpower Commission. McNutt said he was counsel for the Motion Picture Association of America, Inc., and the Association of Motion Picture Producers.

wheat. The alltime high was reached in 1917 when May wheat sold at $3.25.

Bread Prices Going up

The Nation's harassed housewives in many cities yesterday learned the hard way the effect of recent market upsurges in wheat. In many cities bread went up a cent a loaf, with prices of wheat and other ingredients of bread still skyward bound.

Luckman, tired and worn after the day long meeting, told newsmen last night that the plan the poultry and feed men "submitted was not sufficient specific, in measures by which it would be terms of grain to be saved or on saved, to warrant at this time the abandonment of poultryless Thursday."

During the meeting the poultry raisers admitted that the ban on chickens and turkeys on Thursdays was cutting into their business. They charged that the program was defeating its own purpose—that it was keeping poultry on farms eating grain that would otherwise be conserved.

Instead of banning poultry from the diner tables, they urged that the Government encourage the consumption of all fowls possible.

Unsatisfied With "Program"

In reply, Luckman declared that they had offered no concrete program to cut down on poultry raising—although he said that at one time a suggestion was made that a 25-per cent reduction in baby chicks and turkeys be considered.

"I hope that the industry will come forward shortly with a program that will both attack this problem and save the grain which must be saved," he stated.

"I do not consider the issue as closed. It will be constantly reviewed and reconsidered when the industry's representatives bring back more specific proposals."

No thought at any time was given to abandoning the eggless feature of Thursday, Luckman said.

The program submitted by the poultry raisers contained two points:

1. Selling all non-productive fowls, which they claimed were consuming almost three million bushels of grain each week.

2. More efficient feeding and culling of flocks.

Feed Dealers See Savings

The poultrymen said they could not estimate total grain savings under their program, but feed dealers predicted 30 million bushels of grain could be saved by efficient feeding and culling of all farm animals, including cattle, hogs and sheep as well as poultry.

Meeting with the two groups were representatives of the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Farmers Union and representatives of the poultry branch of the Department of Agriculture.

The upward plunge in wheat yesterday, in the face of all Government efforts to hold prices down, was spurred by bad weather news from the great winter wheat belt of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and the southwest.

At Kansas City Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson reported that "Governor Carlson of Kansas has said there might be only a 90-million bushel production in his State next year if rains do not fall at once."

Dust Hinders Seeding

Kansas this year harvested more than 294 million bushels, the largest in history.

From Texas came word that heavy dust due to the long dry spell was making seeding impossible in many areas where fall planting should be nearing completion.

Already Government and commercial exporters have bought 340 million bushels of grain for export, Agriculture Department officials estimated last night. This amounts to 61 per cent of the 570 million bushels goal set by President Truman for export.

Another interesting development yesterday was a proposal by Argentina that the 20 other American republics support President Truman's "save-food" program to help Europe.

The Argentine proposal was made to the Pan-American Union's governing board. It was referred to a five-nation committee which was instructed to rephrase the resolution which, some members held, contained "political implications."

Reich Civilian Rule Put Off

and the civilian policy-makers have been reported in Europe and have embarrassed the General in carrying out his duties. Added to these reports have been the frequent stories that the War Department would soon turn over administration in Germany to the State Department.

General Clay has favored such a change-over for more than a year, and has been sounding possible civilian candidates to succeed him. But last year Secretary Byrnes firmly refused to take a responsibility for which he said his Department was not equipped or prepared.

Believes Issues Too Complex

Secretary Marshall advocated State Department control while he was still Chief of Staff, but now, according to McDermott, he feels the problems involved would be too complex for the Department to handle at this time.

So Clay will be able to tell any skeptical foreigners in Berlin that he still is "boss," as far as administrative power is concerned. He can point to the text of the State Department's announcement, which read:

"In answer to inquiries it was announced by the State Department that there is no present intent to take over responsibility for the administration of the occupied areas from the Army, and consideration of such a taking-over has been indefinitely postponed."

On policy decisions Clay is supposed to be the servant of the War Department in the strictly military field and of civilian agencies in the political and economic. It may be, although this could not be confirmed last night, that in return for having his administrative authority reaffirmed Clay also reaffirmed his own willingness to follow policy directives from Washington.

airport, Wright said. He gave no details.

In a lengthy statement submitted to the Finletter Commission, Wright also recommended:

1. That the CAA take over from the CAB the detailed function of writing Civil Air Regulations. This would lift from the latter a large bulk of its present work and enable the board to better handle its basic economic functions.

2. Shift some of the responsibility for safety requirements to the aircraft manufacturing companies and airlines. Manufacturers of proven standing would be given general certificates for airworthiness of planes, and Government inspectors would give new types only a flight test, under the proposal. Designated company representatives rather than CAA inspectors would certify that the many regulatory requirements are met.

Airline companies also should take over a greater share of responsibility for enforcement of civil air regulations dealing with safety, Wright said, as they are better able to "consistently and continuously direct their own operations."

Many airline executives have urged this change of policy. Wright reported that the manufacturing industry, however, is divided on his proposal for further designating certification responsibility.

Overseas Airlines Boosts Pilots' Pay To $1307 a Month

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—American Overseas Airlines and the Airline Pilots Association (AFL) today signed a new contract after 23 months of negotiation and an 18-day strike by 173 pilots. The pilots returned to work last week pending further negotiations.

Under the new contract a captain pilot with eight years experience and flying a Constallation will receive $1307.74 for an 85-hour month's work. The company agreed that each pilot will be guaranteed a minimum of 70 hours work a month and in this category an eight-year captain will receive $1138.73 a month.

A first-class captain uying a Constallation for 85 hours a month will receive $1191.08. Monthly pay of a copilot will range from $450 to $580, and second copilots will receive $365 to $510 a month. The top pay for pilots has been $1075 a month.

48 Va. Drivers Given Permit Suspensions

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—A list of 48 Virginia motorists who have had their operator's licenses—and in some cases registration privileges—suspended or revoked was released today by C. F. Joyner, jr., commissioner of the State Motor Vehicle Division.

Bad driving records accounted for about half of the list.

Drunken driving, hit-and-run driving and some other offenses in which an automobile is used in the commission of a felony do not figure in the bad driving classification since these offenses carry an automatic revocation of a driver's license.

Play Equipment Mostly Donations, Arlingtonian Says

Virtually all recreation equipment in Arlington schools was purchased by parent-teacher groups and individuals, Curtis E. Tuthill, candidate for the Arlington School Board, charged last night.

"The present school board's failure to provide these facilities is inexcusable," he told the New Ballston Civic Association, meeting at Ballston firehouse.

He charged the present board with "lack of interest" in playgrounds and recreation.

Tuthill is one of five nominees proposed by the Citizens' Nomination Convention, all of whom spoke briefly at the meeting. Others on the slate are: Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, Barnard Joy, Colin MacPherson and O. Glenn Stahl.

Employment, Wages Set New Records

Home Construction Also at New High In September, Labor Bureau Reports

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Industrial employment, factory wages and home construction reached new high records in September, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

At the Commerce Department, meantime, some economists suggested that continuation of voluminous exports abroad, through the Marshall Plan program, may be a key factor in keeping business activity, prices and optimism at a high level. These trends show up in increasing accumulation of stocks and the sustained high rate of financial outlays for plant and equipment.

The BLS statistics on the peaks in wages, employment and building were made public by the agency's head, Ewan Clague. He declared at a press conference that "expansion" was the key word for the present situation. He predicted further expansion of economic activity between now and Christmas.

Industrial Employment

On the specific items which the BLS keeps the official statistics, Clague reported:

1. Industrial employment stood at an all-time high of 43 million in September. This is one million more than in September a year ago, and 70,000 more than during even the Christmas peak of last year.

(About 11,500,000 persons were employed in agriculture in September and about 8 million were self-employed and in domestic service in July, the latest month for which figures were available. Assuming these figures remained fairly stable through September, the Nation's total employment would be 62,500,000, a new record for the country.—Editor's note).

Clague forecast that the employment figure would rise by another one million by the first of next year.

Factory Wages Rise

2. Factory wages rose to an average of $50.42 a week in September, the first time they have exceeded the $50 mark. The increase in weekly wages over August was about $1.25.

In dollar terms, these wages are more than double those of 1939. But considering the rise in prices which has taken place since then, the present average wages have only 30 per cent more buying power than in 1939.

3. About 88,000 new homes were started last month, more than in any month in the last 20 years. A large percentage of the homes, however, are in the higher-cost brackets, indicating that relatively few homes are being provided for the lower-income families.

Some of the views of the Commerce Department economists on the present business situation were contained in the monthly Survey of Current Business. The October issue, just published, pointed out the significant fact that the downward trend in accumulating inventories had been reversed in August. In that month, business inventories increased by three quarters of a million dollars.

Another fillip to buying, and hence to industrial activity, was the redemption in September of almost 900 million dollars of GI terminal leave bonds.

Meantime, personal incomes have continued to rise. Wage increases granted earlier this year in pattern-setting industries have spread month by month to other workers.

Furthermore, the latest quarterly report that business capital outlays for industrial construction shows that businessmen contemplate keeping expenditures for this purpose on the present high plateau for the rest of the year.

Exports Decrease

The major item with a trend in the downward direction, the survey reported, was exports. In July and August they receded from the record peaks of earlier months.

Many economists in the Capital had expected this export decline to touch off a recession, first manifest in fewer orders and sharp price declines.

These expectations did not materialize; on the contrary, prices continued to go up. Some Commerce economists believe that the explanation is the prospect of a revival of exports under the Marshall Plan program.

Export Outlook a Factor

Some business groups, these experts believe, see a continuation of the exceptionally high exports, and count on them to remain as a big factor in demand for goods. Accordingly, they do not anticipate price declines. Therefore they continue to place orders and build up their stocks.

The Commerce Department also noted that it expected the volume of construction for the fourth quarter of this year would increase. The reasons were given as the rising trend in residential building during the summer, and the marked increase of nonhome-building contracts awarded in recent months.

Arlington Jury Probes Charge Of Police Gambling Tie-Up

policeman, on whose information police last week raided a gambling establishment allegedly run by Russell "Peanuts" Scheele in Arlington.

Manuel Lazo, Arlington citizen who had twice complained to the Arlington County Board on Scheele's alleged gambling activities.

Crandal Mackey, newspaper editor and attorney, who once served as prosecutor in a gambling investigation in Arlington.

John Saunders, a private on the Arlington County detective force.

C. Burns Pressly, Arlington detective, whose disciplinary suspension as a member of the force yesterday was lifted by County Manager A. T. Lundberg.

Frank L. Ball, Jr., Arlington attorney.

O. R. Lewis, Arlington attorney and Republican candidate for the post of Comonwealth's Attorney in the election to be held this fall.

Capt. Hugh C. Jones, chief of Arlington detectives.

Capt. Ernest H. Miller of the Arlington police traffic department.

I. C. Goings, an employe in the Arlington County Postoffice.

Chief Harry L. Woodyard of the Arlington police.

Albert T. Lundberg, Arlington County manager.

F. Freeland Chew, a member of the Arlington County Board who is up for reelection this fall.

The grand jury met yesterday until 5:15 p. m., considering presentments on eleven persons. It did not begin its deliberations on the gambling investigation until mid-afteroon, however, at the time it returned true bills on eleven persons whose cases were then set down for trial.

Foreman Kirby told Judge McCarthy at that time: "We don't know just what we could do at the present time (on the investigation) unless you have a suggestion."

McCarthy declared he thought the jury should at least hear the testimony of Dugan, Lazo and Smith, and to go on from that point. "I am asking you gentlemen at least to go as far as to hear them," he said.

At the opening of the session yesterday, Judge McCarthy ordered the grand jury investigation into charges of a connection between county police and gamblers. He told jurors that if the investigation showed that a crime had been committed, the person who committed that crime should be prosecuted.

"Few social growths," said Judge McCarthy, "are so insidious and dangerous as the professional gambler."

He pointed out that the jury is "not required to hear all the evidence. You don't have to say if a person is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, but just whether a crime is committed and a person should be prosecuted."

He warned against returning any indictments if there is "no clear-cut case of crime because of the court trial stigma attaching to innocent persons."

Judge McCarthy also pointed to sections of the Virginia Code applicable to such an investigation. One of these sections gives virtual immunity against prosecution for any witness called by the court or the Commonwealth's Attorney who gives evidence before the grand jury for the prosecution. The immunity is "for any offense of giving, or offering to give, or accepting a bribe" if that offense is committed by the witness "at the time and place indicated in such prosecution."

Judge McCarthy told the jurors before he dismissed them for the two-day recess that he hoped their investigation would be as rapid as possible because "this is not a healthy situation."

He also warned them not to discuss the case, or to allow it to be discussed in their presence. "I request you gentlemen to be careful, as much in protection of yourselves as for any other reason," he said.

Railways concerned are the Canadian National Railways, the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., their jointly and separately owned subsidiaries and ancillaries, the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, Algoma Central Railway, Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo Railway, Ontario Northland Railway, Sydney & Louisburg Railway and Essex Terminal Railway.

The strike has been called to enforce the unions' request for 14 days' vacation with pay each year.

Lundberg Admits Error, Reinstates Detective

A. T. Lundberg, Arlington County manager, yesterday announced that the disciplinary suspension of C. Burns Pressly, county detective, had been "set aside."

Lundberg, in a letter to Pressly, explained that he was "hereby restored to duty effective immediately without loss of pay and without prejudice to your record."

"I had been advised," he wrote, "that the action now being rescinded was within the proper authority of the County Manager and it now appears that by reason of a recent change in the law, such authority is now vested exclusively in the Circuit Court.

"Needless to say, I sincerely regret having exceeded my authority in this respect," Lundberg wrote.

Frank L. Ball, jr., attorney for Pressly, said last night that he was "glad the people will now know that it was all an unfortunate mistake."

Return of Overall Controls Declared Vital to Aid World

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP).—Banker James P. Warburg declared tonight that the United States cannot begin to rehabilitate the world until it "recognizes the mistakes of the past" and reinstates governmental controls over prices, production and distribution.

He told the Foreign Policy Association in Baltimore, in an analysis of the international picture, that the American people will respond if they are told the true facts. But he emphasized heavily that "voluntary rationing is not enough."

Warburg, who returned only recently from a two-month survey of conditions abroad, said the United States did three "irresponsible things" after actual hostilities ceased. He said these were the shutdown of lend-lease, the abandonment of rationing and later price controls.

Recovery Held Impeded

The financier declared:

"The result of these three actions was to impede postwar recovery of our friends abroad, and to let our own economy run hog wild into an unhealthy inflationary spiral. Every housewife knows what this has meant in terms of her market basket.

He said the pressing issue now was not to determine responsibility for these errors but to rectify them. The banker said:

"In plain language—and I think we must use plain language even in an election year—we shall have to re-establish some degree of overall planning and control by Government, business and farm leadership working together, as they did in the war.

Control Plan Outlined

"We shall have to control prices and maintain a stable purchasing-power wage level. We shall have to make some things even scarcer than they are today in order to do our job abroad, and this means that we must not only control the price of what remains for the domestic consumer but see to it that what remains is fairly distributed.

Warburg, who served as deputy director of the overseas branch of OWI during the war, hypothetically pictured the United States as comfortably placed on a high plateau, while "down on the plain there are floods and pestilence and faminine." He continued:

"But we do not fully realize that the floods are rising and will, unless arrested, engulf our own hilltop.

"We are not fully aware that, without meaning to do so, we have collected on our hilltop practically all of the available equipment for fighting and controlling flood waters and that, unless we make this equipment available, the people in the valley are helyless."

Political Division Noted

Warburg noted that in the past six months, a political factor has been injected sharply into international rehabilitation.

He said:

"We have moved far in the direction of a world divided into two competing, if not hostile camps, each trying to overcome the economic crisis in its own sphere of influence, in its own way and with little consideration for the other.

"It may not be a popular thng to say but I think it is important for us to realize that in he eyes of other peoples the blame for this tragic development does not rest execlusively with the Soviet Union."

U. S. Policy Criticized

He said most Europeans and Asiatics are aware of the USSR's "needlessly harsh" leadership, and its expansionist policies, but they are fearful and resentful of the way that American foreign policy is swayed by domestic considerations during an election year.

The banker also said:

"The belief (among Europeans) is widespread that we are becoming as doctrinaire and fanatical about free enterprise capitalism as the Russians are about totalitarian communism.

"We seem at times bent on attaching such political strings to economic aid as would force other peoples of the world to remodel themselves in the American image."

More English-Speaking Poles Taken in Underground Drive

Warsaw, Oct. 20 (AP).—Polish police today increased arrests of English-speaking Poles friendly to Americans and Britishers. A spokesman said the drive against underground opposition would continue.

Among the latest arrested were three editors of the Western Press Agency, specializing in disseminating news from Poland's western territories.

Earlier, two employes of the British and American embassies were seized.

The American Embassy made representations against the arrest and five-hour detention of Mrs. Wanda Sroka, an American citizen and embassy clerk. The British acted similarly in the arrest of Charles Whitehead, native Pole and commercial aide at the embassy.

(London dispatches said Britain may break off discussions of Polish compensation for British properties nationalized unless Whitehead is released.)

The Polish government has charged that trouble within Poland is being financed and assisted from abroad.

The spokesman reiterated there would soon be a new trial to "shed more light" on Arthur Bliss Lane while he was United States Ambassador. The government has charged he got information from the underground.

quered Germans and Japanese are granted to the residents of Washington," he added.

Graham said:

"The people of the District are not incapable of self-government. In point of fact, they comprise a higher percentage of college graduates and high-school graduates than any community in the country. And government is their principal occupation. But the sorry truth is that there has descended upon them to some extent that apathy which is characteristic of dependent peoples everywhere."

Graham said that results of an unofficial plebiscite on self-government taken last year in Washington showed only 70 per cent voted for local self-government.

"It must be admitted that there are shabbier reasons than mere apathy behind some of the opposition to home rule for Washington," he said. "It would be dishonest to avoid mention of them. In its culture, Washington is essentially a Southern city.

"In the capital city of the world's greatest democracy, formal racial segregation is extensively practiced. Undemocratic racial ideals work with multiplied force in the undemocratic atmosphere of a community deprived of the right of self-government.

"They work in a vicious circle. The lack of loval government keeps the citizens from gaining any practical experience in working out racial adjustments on a local level. This begets a climate of ignorance and blind fear which in turn has led many white citizens to be willing to give up the franchise themselves rather than permit the Negro to vote."

Graham said the present system of governing the District through committees of Congress results in Senators and Congressmen wasting "away their energies passing local ordinances for Washington."

Man Attempting Empire State Leap Snatched to Safety

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—A man was snatched to safety today as he hung by his hands from the eighty-sixth floor parapet of the Empire State Building, 1050 feet above the street.

Police identified him as Peter McPartland, 25, of Brooklyn, and said two guards seized him by the wrists and dragged him to safety after he clambered over the 4-foot parapet.

He told guards he had decided to jump from the world's tallest building when he found his stockroom job over-taxed his weak heart.

Doctor Advises Brushing Tongue After Meals

Atlanta, Oct. 20 (AP).—Brush your tongue when you clean your teeth, and you'll avoid unpleasant breath, Dr. Raymond E. Johnson, president of the American Academy of Periodontology (pyorrhea) told the Georgia Dental Asociation today. He said the tongue catches debris like grass in a public park. He advocated brushing with a gentle forward motion after every meal.

As for tooth-brushing—"not more than ten per cent of the people today know how to brush their teeth correctly," said Dr. Johnson, gloomily.

Constitutional Rights Denied to Voteless D. C.

The text of the address by Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, on the New York Herald - Tribune Forum yesterday follows:

THE Constitution of the United States declares that "All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States." And it goes on to proclaim that "no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

Well, in the District of Columbia—the seat of the Federal Government—there are some 870,000 citizens whose privileges of citizenship have been very markedly abridged, not by any State but by the Federal Government itself.

They are denied the right of representation in the Legislature which frames their laws—a right defined by our founders in their Declaration of Independence as "inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only."

They are even denied any semblance of local self-rule. Their municipal government, such as it is, consists of appointed proconsuls neither responsible nor responsive to their will.

Their dependency exceeds by far that of the people of Guam, Puerto Rico or Samoa. Not even the forms of self-government allowed to the conquered Germans and Japanese are granted to the residents of Washington.

This situation has both practical and moral consequences for the people of the United States, as well as for the people of the District of Columbia.

Let us look first at its cost to the Nation. The La Follette-Monroney Committee on the reorganization of Congress put it this way: "The Nation cannot afford the luxury of having its national legislative body . . . perform the duties of a city council for the District of Columbia."

Now, nominally the government of the District consists of a Board of Commissioners of three members. But they are possessed of little real authority.

Actually the greatest control of Washington is held by the District Committees of the House and Senate, although they share substantial power with the District Appropriations Subcommittees of the two houses. In addition, almost every other Federal official in town has something to say about District government. The President appoints various local officials. The Budget Bureau must approve local bills being submitted to the Congress. The Secretary of the Interior runs the park system and one of our five separate police forces. The Secretary of the Army runs half the city's water system while the District Commissioners run the other half. The Civil Service Commission, the Bureau of Standards and some 60-odd other boards and commissions all make contributions. About the only agencies that leave us alone are the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission and the Alaska Rural Rehabilitation Corporation.

Let me offer an illustration of how the machinery of government operates in Washington. Let me show you how your Senators and Congressmen are forced to use their time because Washington has no local government. Some time ago the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, a Federal body, recommended the removal of two stone gate posts which constituted a traffic hazard in the side street running between the White House and the State Department. The District Commissioners were ready enough to accept the recommendation. But with them, to think is not promptly to act.

First it was necessary to secure the approval of the Federal Bureau of the Budget. Next a bill was introduced in the House and referred to the District Committee which, in the fullness of time, reported favorably. Then the full House pondered and finally passed the proposal.

THE SENATE, however, was still to be reckoned with. The Senate's District Committee first had to approve the measure. And finally came the day when the greatest deliberative body on earth set aside its consideration of universal military training, of peace treaties and of other trivial undertakings, to determine that the two stone gate posts should indeed be removed.

All that remained now was to speed the bill to the White House. At last the bulldozers could be put to work.

There is nothing singular about this rigamarole. The whole involved procedure must be gone through whenever the District needs a simple ordinance. The Seventy-eighth Congress, a wartime Congress, devoted time and attention to 57 separate District bills dealing with such matters as the sale of shad and herring, the disposal of dead human bodies, and the provision of butter for patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

You people of the 48 States send your Representative to Congress to deal with problems of significance. From your point of view this absurd condition is frustrating your will by demoting your Senators and Congressmen to the level of city councilmen.

From the point of view of the people of the District of Columbia the condition is altogether tragic.

It results inevitably in bad government. The crime statistics of Washington are truly shocking. During the first six months of this year, the Nation's Capital moved to the top of the list among cities of its population grouping in the number of cases of aggravated assault, burglary and petty theft. Yet there is very little that the citizens of the community can do about it. The Washington Post showed that not only was the crime rate appalling, but that it was being concealed by false statistics and inadequate official reporting. But the superintendent of police is appointed by the Commissioners, who are themselves appointed by the President and, therefore, have no fear of retribution at the polls. When a resolution was offered in the closing days of the last congressional session for an investigation of the police department, a single senatorial friend of the police superintendent succeeded in blocking it.

And that situation is typical. The people of the District have no control over local officials, none over the allocation of funds for operating local government and none over the local taxes imposed upon them.

Congress has persistently refused to extend the District income tax to those thousands of Government employes who live in Washington, enjoy the facilities of the community, but claim permanent domicile elsewhere. Why? Because the people who claim permanent domicile elsewhere are supposed to be voters and constituents of Congressmen. The District is nobody's constituency.

The moral consequences are still more serious. The people of the District are not incapable of self-government. In point of fact, they comprise a higher percentage of college graduates and high school graduates than any community in the country. And Government is their principal occupation. But the sorry truth is that there has descended upon them to some extent that apathy which is characteristic of dependent peoples everywhere. They tend to submit to absentee rule which is maintained by force majoure and to accept conditions which they seem unable to change.

ALMOST a year ago an unofficial plebiscite on self-government was held in Washington. The results showed to some degree a disappointing lack of enthusiasm for home rule. Although prior to the plebiscite all Washington newspapers put on a drive to get out the vote, the turnout was smaller than it should have been. And a considerable opposition to home rule was indicated. Although 84 per cent of the voters recorded themselves in favor of representation in the Congress, only 70 per cent voted for local self-government. Now while this result shows a tendency to apathy about self-rule, 70 per cent is after all an unambiguous majority. And before one gets too smug about Washington, remember that no other city has had so to test community support of self-government.

It must be admitted that there are shabbier reasons than mere apathy behind some of the opposition to home rule for Washington. It would be dishonest to avoid mention of them. In its culture, Washington is essentially a Southern city. In the Capital City of the world's greatest democracy, formal racial segregation is extensively practiced. Undemocratic racial ideas work with multiplied force in the undemocratic atmosphere of a community deprived of the right of self-government. They work in a vicious circle. The lack of local government keeps the citizens from gaining any practical experience in working out racial adjustments on a local level. This begets a climate of ignorance and blind fear which in turn has led many white citizens to be willing to give up the franchise themselves rather than permit the Negro to vote.

After last year's plebiscite a study of the attitude of a cross-section of voters showed that only 1 per cent of Negro voters opposed home rule, whereas over 40 per cent of white voters opposed it. The fear of Negro domination of the government was the reason most frequently given for opposition to home rule. Yet further examination showed that this fear resulted largely from basic ignorance about the number of Negroes in the community. The 1940 census had found that 28 per cent of Washington's population was Negro and subsequent studies of the population show that the percentage is still about the same. But one out of every three white residents wildly exaggerated the proportion of Negroes, and it is among those misinformed, fearing a Negro majority that does not exist, that the opposition to local suffrage is highest.

THERE is a saying in Washington that home rule is like the weather. There are signs, however, that this is now changing, that someone at last is going to do something about it. This summer a subcommittee of the House District Committee under the chairmanship of Congressman Auchincloss of New Jersey conducted extensive hearings on home rule and reorganization of District government. The subcommittee's report is now being prepared and we hope that it will recommend legislation establishing home rule.

A prompt end of the present situation must concern not only us in Washington but all of you who have a responsibility for its continuance. It concerns you for two reasons. First, in these times of important decisions, you cannot want your Senators and Congressmen to fritter away their energies passing local ordinances for Washington. And, finally, you cannot desire continuance of the mockery of our principles involved in holding the Capital City of this democracy in voteless bondage.

Anti-Negro Deed Test Set

the United States shall have the same right, in every State and Territory, as enjoyed by white citizens thereof to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property."

3. They are unreasonable restraints on the sale of land.

4. They are against public policy.

5. The injunctions to enforce them are against equity.

6. Enforcement does not carry out the purpose of the clauses, which was to keep prices up, because on Bryant st. houses sell to Negroes for more than to whites.

7. When Letts ordered the Negroes to move out, he went beyond the anti-Negro clauses, since the deeds only forbid renting or sale to Negroes.

Add Own Arguments

Houston and his colleagues urged all of Edgerton's arguments and added more of their own when they took their appeal to the Supreme Court.

For instance, they recalled that in signing the United Nations Charter, this country pledged itself to: "Universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion."

The buyers of the St. Louis house found a like clause in the Act of Chapultepec, which they said was a statement of the public policy.

New Orleans, Richmond and Louisville have passed city ordinances against Negroes moving into white areas, but the court struck down the ordinances as violations of the Constitution. Twenty-one years ago, in another case that arose here in Washington, the court said anti-Negro clauses in private deeds were not void, but there never has been a ruling upon the right of the courts to enforce such rulings.

Other Court Action

Besides granting a hearing in the District cases, the court yesterday:

Split 4 to 4—and thus refused to act—on the appeal of the German Field Marshal Erhard Milch for a writ of habeas corpus. Milch got a life term for murder in a military court in Nuernberg.

Turned down the appeal of two Californians jailed for running a nudist colony near Los Angeles.

Refused to review the reorganization plan for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, to which bondholders objected.

Turned down an appeal from Roger Touhy, who is doing 99 years for kidnaping John "Jake the Barber" Factor; and

Left in force a labor board order to Swift & Co., to bargain with a CIO union in its Jersey City plant.

Navy Enlistments Near Quota As More Veterans 'Ship Over'

A sharp increase in the number of bluejackets "shipping over for another cruise" has allayed the Navy's worries over low recruiting rates.

In September, it was announced yesterday, Navy enlistments totaled 14,971—only 23 men or 2/10th of one per cent short of its quota. Officials declared themselves highly pleased and "optimistic" about the future.

Both the Army and Navy recruiting programs have been lagging, and the Navy's upsurge contrasted with a further Army drop in September. Army recruiters then signed up barely half of their quota—11,075 new and reenlistments compared to 21,000 men desired.

In new recruits, the Navy was considerably below quota expectations—getting 7475 compared to its quota of 11,000. But reenlistments ran 7502—nearly twice what was expected. Officials said that 55 per cent of the men whose enlistments expired signed up for another hitch.

The Air Force has been doing better than either of the two older services. In September, a total of 10,084 reenlistments and new recruits were tallied, well over the Air Force quota of 2000 men a month.

Army chiefs declare that a solution of its recruiting troubles lies in passage of universal military training legislation, additional funds for housing and greater cooperatio nfrom the public. A recent attack on Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee's Army command in Italy by a newspaper columnist is considered partially responsible for the September drop in Army enlistments.

Navy recruiting chiefs are particularly pleased with the latest results in that the Navy—unlike the Army and Air Forces—has no paid advertising campaign nor funds to launch one.

Soviet Group Quits Korean Commission

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union abruptly withdrew its delegation from the joint United States-Soviet commission on Korea today and said the United States delegation's position made mpossble the creaon of1526g made impossible the creation of a "united independent Korea."

Col. Gen. Terenty F. Shtikov, chief of the Soviet delegation, personally informed Maj.-Gen. Albert E. Brown, chairman of the American delegation, that his group had been ordered to return to Pyongyang, capital of the Northern Russian occupation zone.

Shtikov said that the position taken by the American delegation made impossible realization of the Moscow decision of 1945 "toward creating a united independent Korea under guidance of a provisional Korean democratic government," and that the Soviet delegation had "exerted all its efforts toward the speediest fulfillment" of the agreement.

Deadlocked for 2 Years

The commission, which has been deadlocked for more than two years on the question of what Korean political groups would be permitted to participate in their own government, was adjourned Saturday after the United States proposed a "recess" until called upon for aid by a possible United Nations commission.

Shtikov's brief statement left unclear whether the Soviet withdrawal was actual acceptance of the American proposal or unilateral action signifying an end to the commission.

High United States military authorities here almost unanimously accepted the latter interpretation and cited as motives the recent expose of an extensive Soviet spy ring which operated in the southern, American-occupied zone, and the "obvious" intention in the Soviet withdrawal announcement of throwing blame for the commission's failure entirely on the United States.

Soviet Demand Rejected

Simultaneous with Shtikov's announcement, Brown read to him a statement by American Military Commander Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodges rejecting a Soviet demand that a South Korean police chief be dismissed for allegedly slandering a member of the Soviet delegation, by accusing him of leading a Soviet espionage ring in the American zone.

The rejection backed up the charges and bluntly accused the Soviets of directing "ringleaders of seditious planning and activity aimed at destruction of orderly government and at fomenting extensive and violent disturbance in South Korea."

Wedemeyer Report Will Be Kept Secret

By The Associated Press

The State Department yesterday ruled against disclosure of the report Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer made on Korea and China, holding that publication now would be "actually harmful" to those countries and to the United States.

In another development relating to the Orient, the department said that last Saturday it formally rejected Russia's proposal that Russian and American occupation troops withdraw simultaneously from Korea.

Rejection of the request had been predicted in advance by officials who indicated privately a feeling that the Russian-trained Korean army might try to take over if occupation forces pull out.

Wedemeyer investigated conditions in China and Korea at the request of President Truman. The State Department acknowledged "urgings" from some quarters for publication of his report, but said much of it was based on confidential information and concluded:

"It therefore would be inadvisable, actually harmful, to the interest of the countries concerned, including the United States, to publicize such a document at this time."

Red Troops Cut Electric Lines To Changchun

Peiping, Oct. 20 (AP).—Changchun, capital of Manchuria, lay in darkness tonight and listened to gunfire from the east, where Communist troops cut the electric lines leading to the city.

Conceding that the Manchurian civil war situation had taken a serious turn for the worse, the Chinese government reported that the Communists had completed a series of wide encircling moves around both Changchun and the power center of Kirin, 60 miles to the east.

The railway between the two cities was cut at several points.

ported De Gaulle's anti-Communist Union of the French people (RPF) in Sunday's balloting.

At midnight tonight, with 4,400,393 votes tabulated, De Gaulle's party had 43.3 per cent, the Communists 30.4, Socialists 15.5, and Popular Republicans 10.8 per cent.

De Gaulle was elected a village council at Colombey les Eglises by an overwhelming write-in vote, although he was not on the ballot. Edouard Herriot, head of the Radical Socialist Party which supported De Gaulle in many communes, was reelected mayor of Lyons.

De Gaulle, himself was surprised at the scope of his triumph. But even if the cabinet of Socialist Premier Paul Remadier resigned, the wartime resistance leaders has no parliamentary party to support him in forming a new government. Assembly deputies have been forbidden by party edicts to throw their weight to him.

Hence, De Gaulle will refuse to assume office unless a popular plebiscite is held "even if he were called," Andre Malraux, an RPF leader, said.

Barrett's Free Hand

Citizens of the District of Columbia who read Zechariah Chafee's new work on "Government and Mass Communications" will suspect that this eminent authority has had under scrutiny the policies of the Metropolitan Police Department. If he had been studying the efforts of the Police Department to withhold reports of crimes, to keep confidential many complaints, to cut the press off teletype circuits and otherwise conceal operations of the department he could not have made more pertinent comment than this paragraph:

> No doubt there are many matters which ought not to be disclosed for a time, but officials should not have a free hand to determine what those matters are or to lock them up forever. It may be human nature for them to want their say-so to be decisive on the need for secrecy, but the possession of such a power would allow them to hoist public safety as an umbrella to cover their own mistakes.

If he had been privy to wishes of some friends of the Police Department to install a public relations officer, he could not have devised a more relevant paragraph than this one:

> Although such a screener may prevent some misstatements by ill-informed newspapermen, it is much better to have the sifting of truth from falsehood done by the newspaper which serves the public than by the very agency which may deserve condemnation.

Of course, Mr. Chafee has had no opportunity to observe closely the concealment of crime reports, the distortion of statistics and the other maneuvers by which the Police Department has attempted to keep its operations from public knowledge. His pointed paragraphs do not prove a familiarity with local cases. What they do show is that the struggle of the public to be informed about its government is a struggle that must go on everywhere and at all times. In dealing with these local and immediate problems of police administration, Washington has been dealing with problems of fundamental rights that are universal in time and place.

It is in such everyday dress that these issues of greatest public importance always arise. The passage of years and the talents of textbook writers invest with the glamour of historic contest the little local quarrels over things that many dismiss, in passing, as petty details of administration. It is only when these controversies are seen in perspective that their importance is clear. It is the virtue of such books as Mr. Chafee's that they bring us new flashes of insight into the contemporary struggles for the liberties that he discusses.

Peace Production Board

Wendell Berge, former chief of the Justice Department's antitrust division, put the case for a peace production board very plainly and directly when he was interviewed by Ed Hart over WINX on Sunday. He regards implementation of the Marshall Plan of giving aid to Europe as imperative to the restoration of peace and order in the world. And since this will necessitate the exportation of substantial quantities of food, steel, machinery and other commodities that are already in short supply, he thinks that the Government must allocate scarce materials, control prices and ration consumers' goods in short supply as a means of avoiding collapse and depression at home. For this purpose he would set up a peace production board.

We think the logic of Mr. Berge's suggestion is unassailable. The country found the control of its basic resources to be a primary essential to winning the war. We do not think that the Administration or Congress should shrink from the employment of similar controls for the achievement of peace and reconstruction. How much control will be needed to back up the Marshall Plan is still a matter of speculation, but, as a minimum, powers of allocating the basic sinews of reconstruction ought to be readily at hand. If such authority were lodged in a peace production board, that agency itself would be in the best possible position to suggest what further controls would be necessary.

There is a big question, of course, as to the feasibility of restoring either consumer rationing or price controls. At present both the Administration and Congress appear to be hostile to the idea, and the complicated nature of such ventures is discouraging unless it is impossible to find an alternative. We suspect that a majority of the people are in the mood of watching and waiting to see how effective the President's voluntary food saving program is going to be. If the inflationary spiral continues to mount, in spite of all that is being accomplished by this constructive effort, the clamor for restoration of controls may well become irresistible. Meanwhile it would certainly be a step forward to set up a peace production board to manage the more limited allocations program that is necessary to channel the food we are saving (plus machinery, steel and so forth) into countries and industries where it can render the greatest service to the cause of European reconstruction.

De Gaulle's Comeback

What Charles de Gaulle will do with the power behind the scenes which the French electorate has vested in him is a question which is of great interest to France and beyond the confines of France. His organization, which is not even a political party, comes out of the French municipal elections with the top vote. It is called RPF, or Reunion, sometimes Rally, of the French People, and six months ago it was not in existence. Its entire platform is so single-mindedly anti-Communist that De Gaulle during the campaign said very little about the domestic perplexities of France and how he would deal with them. But, judging from his previous utterances, he will agitate for a change in the constitution of the Fourth Republic so as to strengthen the powers of the executive in these times of world crisis. Last April he declared that the constitution of the Fourth Republic was "the badly built framework of the country which had led the nation astray."

Any such agitation would test the ability of the Popular Republican-Socialist coalition to survive. RPF is not represented in France's legislative body, and De Gaulle pressure would have to be exerted throughout the Popular Republicans, or MRP, which has hitherto been the party of the Right. It was from this party that De Gaulle picked up most of his votes, leaving it with a loss of prestige which is bound to make it veer in De Gaulle's direction. If, therefore, General de Gaulle resurrects his demand for change in the constitution, it is likely that the MRP, which broke with De Gaulle on the constitutional issue, would bow to his lead. In this respect the constitution contains some elastic provisions for amendment. Any article, for instance, may be revised merely by a resolution commanding a majority of votes in both the Assembly and the upper legislative body called the Council of the Republic. Or the constitution can be amended by popular vote after a resolution to amend has passed two readings of the Assembly.

However, no matter how complaisant the MRP proved to be to any diktat from De Gaulle, any constitutional debate at present would precipitate civil war. And the Socialists would be pushed into the arms of the Communists. Now civil war is certainly not to De Gaulle's taste, in spite of his loathing for the Communists; nor is he so devoid of statesmanship as to commit the [illegible]tary error of pushing his advantage [illegible] time when France's economic fortunes are at the nadir. He is first and foremost a patriot, and we feel convinced he will be guided by these considerations, and postpone his constitutional demands. Why, moreover, should he force the issue? The power, judging from the present vote, will be his one of these days, and for the present his best course would be to strengthen the hand of the existing government in the effort to keep the economy afloat and the Communists out of power.

Of course, none can say what the Communists will do. After waging probably the fiercest campaign in history, they made no headway, and must now consider their next course. In the revival of the Comintern, in which they participated, they seemed to get the cue for direct action. In that event De Gaulle and his followers, with the municipal vote as encouragement, will certainly take up any challenge. They are as unafraid of direct action as the Communists. In such a situation the government—a government of the center—would be caught in a bloody conflict between extremes. How to save France from bloodshed must be the preoccupation of all centrists. In spite of the new polarization of forces, the Socialists still hold the balance of power, and they, as well as the Popular Republicans, would be well advised to reciprocate any aid that De Gaulle may now offer in saving France till the immediate danger is passed, and the Marshall Plan has been debated in the United States to a decision.

Men And Hemlines

Men generally are reported to be putting up a solid front against the "new look" in feminine fashions, and especially against longer skirts. In a recent Washington debate, between newspapermen and women fashion editors, the men complained chiefly that longer hemlines lessened their opportunities for ogling, though some were hopeful more display above the waist was in prospect. On the whole, they disdained the new styles as grandmotherly. Similar masculine protests are heard throughout the country.

Psychiatrists might see in this a latent masculine jealousy of the sartorial attention women are now receiving. For it has been only in the last 200 years that men have had to take a back seat in the fashion picture. Prior to the middle of the eighteenth century they were the peacocks of the human species, the wearers of gorgeous velvets, satins, brocades, gold braid, silver buckles and lace frills. They also initiated fashions that caused talk around the world. But the social change toward democracy and toward uniformity in dress and custom has been steadily turning them into regimented grubs. Only male birds, animals and savages have kept their resplendence.

This jealousy might also explain why men have repeatedly in the past raised the most hubbub about changes in women's fashions. The discarding of the feminine cap set off an uproar on their part. One Timothy Timberline, a writer, in 1758, vigorously condemned women for leaving off caps and for appearing in public without sufficient petticoats. The Boston Weekly Magazine in 1822 rebuked women for their "immodest practice" of exposing naked elbows. In 1852, the Democratic Review called the fashion plates of the day "intensely vulgar and often indecent and shamefully loose." Later women met widespread censure for wearing red flannel petticoats, which their men critics charged expressed the state of their feelings, and for wearing waistcoats that made them appear "fast." Men also have criticised, ridiculed and cartooned them for wearing hoop skirts, ankle-length skirts, slit skirts, hobble skirts, knee-length skirts, peek-a-boo waists, low-cut waists, sleeveless waists, corsets—and no corsets.

Up to the present, men's chief stricture on women's fashion changes has been for their increasing exposure of feminine charms, for the taking off rather than the adding to of raiment. Its theme has been: What is the world coming to with all this brazenness? But now oddly enough, the masculine commotion is because legs are covered. Could it be that the world has changed? Or that men have?

Film Flam

Filmland, it is scarcely to be doubted, has its quota of Communists as of reactionaries, vegetarians, prohibitionists and fanatics in other fields. The movies, which pretend to be an art form as well as an industry, naturally attract some extremists. But anyone who has seen any appreciable number of Hollywood's products must recognize that the industrial considerations are very much in the ascendancy. This is to say that movies are made for money and that, in the main, they are made, therefore, to appeal to a mass audience and to reflect mass tastes. This is why, like the radio and the mass circulation magazines, they tend to stereotyped values, romantic absurdities and happy endings.

Most movies concern themselves exclusively with entertainment. Considering their immense potentiality for the communication of ideas—evidenced by the occasional film which comes to grips with the realities and problems of life—this is a defect. But it is not a defect which any agency of the Government can legitimately attempt to correct. For governmental interference in the making of movies would be an abridgement of press freedom. Chairman Thomas of the House Committee on Un-American Activities may pretend that his supercolossal Hollywood investigation is aimed not at interference but merely at exposure. Its effect, nevertheless, is to intimidate and coerce the industry into an even more rigid acceptance of Mr. Thomas' concepts of Americanism.

In showing, as he will no doubt manage to do without difficulty, that there are in Hollywood some individuals subversive by the interesting standards of his committee, Mr. Thomas will by no means have established what must be his major premise—that these individuals have succeeded in making the movies a vehicle for Communist propaganda. Representative Rankin said in Congress a couple of years ago that Hollywood's products contained some "loathsome, filthy, insinuating, un-American undercurrents." Unless this assertion can be supported and these undercurrents identified, there can be no justification whatever for an inquiry into the private political, social and economic views of the movie industry's employes. Those who labor in Hollywood are not accustomed to much privacy; but they should be left free, at least, to think as they please.

Sixth In Din

It is with mixed emotions that we view the report of a New York sound laboratory indicating that Washington is the sixth noisiest city in the Nation. That, we suppose, should entitle us to some sort of oscar or even a noon whistle, though to be sure the honor is not one to be coveted in the same manner as, for instance, the national safety awards. We have suspected all along that there is no shortage of decibels here; Capital Transit and our efficiently sirened Fire Department see to that, not to mention our bumper crop of trigger-horn drivers. But it would be curious to learn just what peculiar virtue entitled us to preference over New York, which ranked sixty-third, despite its added qualifications in the form of subways and elevateds.

The precise reason why Reno, Nev., should rank first also requires a little conjecture. The report lists Reno's "floating playtime population" as the cause. It may be that this phraseology is a euphemism for the war-whoops of the more boisterous of the newly parted. We have never thought of Philadelphia as a particularly noisy place, and undoubtedly its second-place rank will cause some eyebrow raising among the staid Main Liners. The City of Brotherly Love, however, has an out in that the principal cause of the din is listed as sailors on shore leave, and thus there [illegible] be an effort to write them off as outlanders. Washington, however, has no such convenient excuse. We have always thought of our city as a pleasant, peaceful place immune from the graver curses of urban life—at least compared with such centers as Boston and Chicago, which rank just above us. Could it be that some of the more leather-lunged stalwarts on Capitol Hill are giving Washington a bad reputation?

THE KENNEDY FARM, NEAR HARPER'S FERRY

Poor weather-gray and shadowy within,
The faded paper hangs in strips from walls,
Lame furniture, and dust to fill a bin,
Till feet must print as yielding floorboards creak:
Yet this drab shack can stir me more than halls
Of monarchs, for I hear a prophet speak.

I climb to that cramped window where he scanned
The sky so clear above Potomac's breast
Save for one cloud no bigger than his hand,
And even as he watched the night came down,
Shot through with fire. "Lord, now make manifest Thy will!" I tremble. Here once dwelt John Brown.

Relief For Pakistan

For just over two months the Punjab and Delhi have been in the grip of widespread disturbances creating a tremendous flow of refugees, men, women and children, from one dominion to the other. The question of relief and rehabilitation of these refugees has become by far the most serious of the problems with which the new states of Pakistan and India are confronted. In Pakistan the number of refugees has already reached 2,500,000 and the sad procession shows no sign of abatement. A large proportion of this number is badly wounded and sick. In many cases the refugees, particularly the aged and the children, arrive in a state of extreme exhaustion and starvation.

The Pakistan government is straining every nerve to provide relief and to arrange for their settlement within Pakistan. Public institutions in Pakistan and private individuals are also doing all they can within the limits of their resources to afford relief, but the problem has assumed appalling dimensions, and relief on a very large scale is urgently needed, particularly in the form of trained relief workers, drugs, vaccines, serum and nourishment for the children and the sick. An added element of suffering is apprehended from the approach of the severe Pakistan winter. This will necessitate the supply of blankets on a large scale as in the vast majority of cases the refugees were able to escape only with their lives and the clothes that covered their bodies.

Pakistan has unfortunately no woolen mills and the need of blankets and warm clothing is being keenly felt as the lack of these necessary articles might result in the loss of hundreds of thousands of lives from pneumonia and other similar diseases.

Some amount of aid has already been received from the United Kingdom and the United States, and more is on the way. The Pakistan government desires to express their grateful acknowledgment of this timely and generous help, but the situation requires a more widespread and generous response to the distress which has so suddenly overtaken so large a number of men, women and children.

I wish to appeal through your columns to all charitable and humanitarian institutions in this great country and to its citizens who have always put themselves in the forefront in all cases where relief has been needed for distressed humanity. I have every confidence that this appeal will receive a quick, generous and widespread response. Offers of assistance may kindly be directed to the Pakistan Trade Commissioner, 63 East 52d st., New York City.

Ambassador of Pakistan.

Unsympathetic Police

Recently my sister was almost drowned when her rowboat capsized in the Potomac river. One of her companions, who was a good swimmer, saved her life but, sadly enough, the other occupant of the boat was drowned.

When these two survivors were picked up, they were cold, wet, and scared. They had lost their shoes and half their clothes.

I find it almost impossible to believe that the police showed them not one small grain of sympathy. They were given no dry clothes or blankets, nothing warm to drink and not one kind word. They were swamped with harsh questions.

When the police finished questioning them around midnight they let them go. They didn't even take them home in a scout car or patrol wagon. They didn't call the girls' parents to let them know about the accident or show any interest whatsoever. My sister and her friend walked for almost an hour, half naked and shoeless before they hailed a taxi. Their parents, who had not been told what had occurred, hardly recognized these ghost-like children who knocked on their doors around 2 o'clock in the morning.

When I was young, I was taught in the very first grade that the policeman was everybody's friend. If a friend is thus, then I want no parts of friendship.

State Department Gag

In his cartoon of October 13, Herblock has given a perfect presentation of the new "thought control" policy of the State Department.

Despite our long tradition of free speech, free association and free political affiliation, the department now tries to circumscribe its employes with the type of rules which allegedly happen only behind the so-called "iron curtain."

I can only hope that Herblock and The Washington Post will continue in the front ranks in the fight for freedom and democracy.

Am I right in assuming from Herblock's recent cartoon, "You're With the State Department, I Presume," that The Washington Post advocates that State Department employes shall blabber all that they know at cocktail parties?

"Hypodermic Gun"

Your October 13 editorial concerning the new pneumatic hypodermic leads me to wonder whether the panty-waist in charge of your antifirearms policy is becoming hysterical.

If it were possible to go back 100,000 years and prohibit the existence of all weapons, an optimistic view would indicate that the world would be better off today; a pessimistic view, on the other hand, would indicate that today we would probably still be climbing up trees to avoid wild pigs and any other creature with more muscle and better natural armament than we possess.

Only, however, by such retroactive tactics could any present-day prohibition on weapons have the slightest effect because weapons, firearms in particular, are in existence in quantities running into unnumbered millions. A law prohibiting possession of firearms will no more prevent anyone who wants a gun from getting one than prohibition prevented anyone who wanted a drink from getting it. The effect of such a law is to take guns away from the honest man and make them the monopoly of the crook.

With the new pneumatic hypodermic, however, only one or two units are in existence. Presumably, a certain amount of skill and "know how" is required to produce them, and this offers an opportunity for restriction comparable to that of the above hypothetical 100,000 years ago. In addition, under no circumstances could the hypodermic be considered a defensive weapon, whereas a gun is either offensive of defensive, depending on the hand that holds it.

If anyone can object to restriction of this new instrument on any of the bases hypothesized in your editorial, he could only do so by being guilty of as perfect illogic as the panty-waist first above-mentioned.

Increase In Steel Production

I know you and your readers will be interested to learn that, contrary to the opinions expressed by A. M. Gray in the letter which you printed on October 3, steel companies have been steadily improving and expanding their facilities since the end of the war.

This year and next the bills for that work will add up to one billion dollars, more money than the entire steel industry earned during the war years. We believe that program matches, if it does not top, any expenditure for the same purposes in the same period by any other industry in the country.

Postwar steel expansion has been underway for two years. Scheduled for completion this year and next are 2,500,000 tons of ingot capacity; three million tons of blast furnace capacity; three million tons of coke oven capacity; three million tons of sheet and strip capacity. In addition, large increases in facilities for finished products other than sheet and strip are under way. That hardly sounds like "selling our country short," to quote Mr. Gray.

The "stunted and crippled industries," of which Mr. Gray wrote, will probably turn out five million automobiles and trucks this year, an increase of 62 per cent over 1946. Cooking stoves and ranges are up 38 per cent over the same year. Oil burner production has been raised 25 per cent; hot water heaters 34 per cent.

Production in other fields is at or near record heights. There has been enough steel to keep factories booming all over the land, in addition to filling up inventories, a two-fold job which has created an unprecedented and abnormal demand for steel. As soon as the pipelines are full, the steel demand for that purpose will lessen.

Critics like Mr. Gray forget, or ignore, a number of facts that should be considered in any discussion of supply and demand for steel. The first is the staggering loss of 18 million tons of steel through strikes in steel and coal alone. That is equal to two and one half months of production on present schedules. It is more than 10 per cent of all the steel turned out since September, 1945. It is equivalent to raising steel capacity by 20 per cent for 1 year. If that steel had been available, there would be little talk of steel shortages today.

Another fact the critics ignore is the short supply and poor quality of available scrap, a vital basic material in steelmaking. Much of the fuel of all kinds is of inferior quality. The list of other difficulties is long. But the steel industry, in spite of them, will turn out about 84 million tons of steel this year, if production maintains its present pace. This amount of steel will be 17 million tons more than the total produced in the previous record peacetime year.

Steel capacity cannot be increased by waving a wand and rubbing a lamp. To produce any such capacity increase as 10 to 20 million ingot tons, which some people are demanding, would require several years. Such a program would have to start right down at the bottom of the production ladder with more ore, more coal, more oil, more water and more men, just as a starter. It would also take out of the market some millions of tons of steel which would otherwise go to steel users.

The only practical course by which to increase steel production is the one the industry has been pursuing for 2 years and will continue to pursue. It means expansions and improvements such as are now going on, increasingly efficient technology, and hard work to solve supply problems that are preventing full use of present facilities.

Britain's Gap

LONDON—The trade-union leaders who direct Britain's government today face a dilemma inexpressibly painful. They must try to convince their following that the only salvation for England lies in more production with less pay.

This is contrary to all the doctrine preached for at least a generation. A Socialist Labor government was to usher in the era of shorter hours and more pay. It was to begin something like the millennium.

That is the picture still in the minds of millions of earnest men and women who have absorbed trade-union doctrine. They were brought up on the parliamentary socialism of Britain's Labor Party. The trade unions, the cooperative movement, the party itself were all instruments of education, teaching the belief that socialism (and the millennium) could come peacefully by the ballot box.

By voting for socialism the people would take control of industry, and the profits which had previously gone to a few owners would be distributed among all the wage earners. For many of the faithful that goal seemed to be achieved when the Labor Party triumphed at the polls two years ago. The triumph coincided with the end of the war, as weary Britons, regardless of politics, were expecting a little more margin for comfort and pleasure.

In two years since the election the leaders of the Labor Party have come up against the grim facts of England's economic position in the world. They have been reluctant to face the facts—and understandably. The American loan was, in some respects, an effort to postpone a final reckoning.

BUT THAT reckoning can no longer be postponed. The deficit of food and raw materials which must be imported into this island cannot be waved away by a political formula. Even if nationalization were to be pushed right across the board, comparatively little would be added to what the workers get. One of the leaders of the Labor Party's left wing admitted candidly that it would mean hardly more than 10 per cent added to the pay envelope.

In other words, wealth cannot be created by nationalization. The Socialist government must try to cut the cloth, desperately scarce, to cover the body politic of Great Britain.

The scramble just now is to find the dollars to cover the deficiency of the next six months. If that gap is not filled in, industry will begin to go backward instead of forward. The spiral of depression, as Sir Stafford Cripps warned, will set in and no one can predict where it will end.

This temporary emergency can be resolved by temporary expedients such as unfreezing the remaining 400 million dollars of the American loan. The bottom of all the barrels can be scraped—on one condition. That condition is that long-term assistance will come for Europe and Britain through the Marshall Plan. If the last dollar is scraped up and then there is no Marshall Plan, the resulting collapse will shake a lot of foundations a long way from this island kingdom.

THE IMMEDIATE task of the Attlee government is to try to frame an austerity budget. That means cracking down on the very people who put the Socialist government in power. For a politician that is a sad necessity, to be put off as long as possible.

There are many, both inside and outside the government, who fear the chain of consequences that cracking down may invite. Take the matter of food subsidies. The government is this year spending more than $1,500,000,000 to underwrite the cost of essential foods.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton, who can never bear to offend a Labor voter, has apparently been persuaded that, in the new austerity budget, food subsidies may be reduced. The average citizen will then pay a higher food bill and some of the excess currency will be absorbed. Money far in excess of goods available is exerting a constant inflationary pressure.

But how will the Labor voter react when he pays out more of his income for food? He is very likely to come through with a demand for higher pay, even though he is told by his own government that higher pay will add to inflation and make the position of the government that much more difficult.

Even now, without any planned increase in the cost of living, the coal miners' union is demanding an increase of $4 (1 pound) a week on the minimum wage in the industry, which is only $20 weekly. They are pressing that demand on the National Coal Board, which is the government agency directing the operation of the mines since they were nationalized by the Attlee government. In one coal field a strike already has occurred which meant a loss of coal priceless to Britain's recovery.

It is one thing to crack down on your enemies. It is quite another thing to have to discipline your friends, and that is what the Labor government must try to do.

Misleading Headline

I certainly don't think you were "speaking frankly" when you framed the headline for the first of James F. Byrnes' articles published on October 15.

"Sick President's Lack of Preparation for Yalta Conference Dismayed Byrnes" is certainly not the implication Byrnes meant to convey when he further stated "I am sure the failure to study them (the State Department reports) en route was due to the President's illness. And I am sure that only President Roosevelt with his intimate knowledge of the problem could have handled the situation so well with so little preparation." R. A. C.
Washington.

"Speaking Frankly"

By Sumner Welles

A Rectification

FORMER Secretary James F. Byrnes could have selected no more fitting title for his book than Speaking Frankly. The book is not only frank. An essay in self-revelation, it could not be surpassed. The American people will now more readily understand the reasons for the present international crisis and be enabled more accurately to assess the measure of responsibility of the man who during a brief, but nevertheless determining, period in world history, was entrusted with the direction of their foreign policy.

On page 38 Mr. Byrnes presents stenographic notes which he tells us he took of a conversation at Yalta between Roosevelt and Stalin regarding the countries to be invited to become members of the United Nations. Stalin objected to the inclusion of states that had severed relations but that had not actually declared war upon the Axis. The President is purported to have said: "Four years ago the Acting Secretary of State, Mr. Welles, told the South American republics it was not necessary to declare war on Germany, but that it was necessary to cut off diplomatic relations . . . Quite frankly it was a mistake of Mr. Welles in not advising them to declare war instead of merely breaking off diplomatic relations."

In view of the innumerable conversations I had with the late President upon inter-American relations, which necessarily gave me an accurate estimate of the respect for the sovereignty of the Latin-American countries by which he was guided in his good neighbor policy, it is impossible for me not to believe that Mr. Byrnes' stenographic notes have been garbled.

But since his report, if unchallenged, may raise some doubt in the minds of our Latin-American neighbors as to the sincerity with which President Roosevelt observed the principles which he professed, the following factual statement may serve a useful purpose.

IMMEDIATELY after Pearl Harbor the 21 American governments agreed to hold a consultative meeting of their foreign ministers at Rio de Janeiro on January 15, 1942. I was appointed by the President to represent the United States at that conference.

The five Central American republics, Panama, Cuba, the Dominican Republic and Haiti, had already declared war upon the Axis. Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela had broken all relations. The remaining eight republics of South America had not yet determined upon the action they would take.

The chief objective of the conference was to agree, if possible, upon such joint action by all of the American nations as would be best calculated to protect the hemisphere and to insure the security of the United States.

The state of public opinion and the internal political situation in several South American countries were such as to make it impossible for their governments then to declare war even had they wished to do so. The military authorities in most of South America believed that the Axis was invincible. The people of many republics, with no small reason, feared that their thousands of miles of unprotected coasts might readily be invaded. Axis agents and Axis sympathizers were numerous and powerful.

HAD THE United States at that time attempted to compel these South American republics to declare war upon the Axis, this country would have been accused of trying to force its neighbors into war, not for their salvation, but solely to save its own skin. Axis propagandists would have been given precisely the issue they wanted. Pan-American solidarity, so vital to our own safety, would have been shattered beyond repair.

Early in January I was informed by our own War and Navy Departments that they strongly opposed any conference agreement which went beyond the severance of diplomatic and economic relations with the Axis. They stressed the unpreparedness of a majority of the South American republics. They told me the United States would be unable for some time to furnish military and naval material to its neighbors. They insisted that a declaration of war on the part of the South American states might well result in Axis aggression against them, and in that event the additional burden placed upon the United States would create a situation of extreme danger for this country.

Before leaving for Rio de Janeiro, I went over with President Roosevelt the address which I had prepared for the opening session of the conference. The President in particular approved this paragraph of my text: "As each one of you knows, my Government has made no suggestion, and no request, as to the course which any of the governments of the other American republics should pursue subsequent to the Japanese attack upon the United States and the declaration of war upon it by the other Axis powers. We do not function in that way in the American family of nations." The President enthusiastically indorsed the principle expressed in the final sentence.

THESE WERE the beliefs of President Roosevelt, and the views of his Administration, in January, 1942.

There is one detail in Mr. Byrnes' account which should not pass unnoticed. According to his version, President Roosevelt stated that I, as Acting Secretary of State, had "told" the other American republics how they should decide a question which, above all others, should only be determined by the sovereign will of independent peoples. Never during the years I served under the President did the Department of State ever "tell" any other American republic what action it should take. Never did President Roosevelt ever suggest such a step.

It was only after Mr. Byrnes was appointed Secretary of State that "telling" our American neighbors became a feature of our policy. And the results of that policy have been only too tragically apparent.

Test In France

By Barnet Nover

De Gaulle And The Communists

NOT SINCE the climactic days of the Dreyfus case, almost half a century ago, has France witnessed such a violent swing of the political pendulum as that which occurred last Sunday.

NOVER

In the elections of 1900, the French people rose in their wrath against the reactionary clique in the army and its ultranationalist and clerical supporters inside and outside the government, and gave a thumping majority to the radical parties.

In last Sunday's municipal elections in France, a political explosion of equal intensity occurred. This time, however, the victors were not the parties of the left but Gen. Charles de Gaulle's distinctly right-wing movement, the Reunion of the French People.

Candidates supported by this movement (RPF) polled in excess of 40 per cent of all the votes cast. Nothing like such a sweep has ever been witnessed before in the history of either the Fourth or the Third Republic.

THE TOTAL VOTE polled by candidates of the RPF, amazing in itself, is even more amazing when we recall that the RPF only came into being last April. Moreover, an earlier attempt to create a Gaullist party—the so-called Gaullist Union which participated in the general elections of November, 1946—had got nowhere.

Actually the RPF is not so much a party as a revolt against parties. In its ideology it represents not so much a coherent program of political action as an attitude of disgust with the political, financial and economic confusion which has characterized the French situation since the liberation. Above all, it is anti-Communist.

IT IS A REASONABLE assumption that, having scored such a magnificent success at the polls, the RPF will now seek to consolidate its gains by forming itself into a regular political organization prepared to contest with other regular parties for the control of the government.

This, to be sure, would be contrary to General de Gaulle's professed plan. He has always insisted that he was above parties and anti-party. He did not hesitate to cut the ground from under the one political organization, the Popular Republican Movement, which for a long time most clearly reflected his views. Indeed, the success of the RPF in last Sunday's balloting was very largely achieved at the expense of the Popular Republicans.

Yet unless the RPF does become a party, it will lack the organization, the discipline, the coherence without which it cannot become the powerful political instrument De Gaulle needs for the achievement of his aims.

IN THE MEANTIME, the victory of the RPF, while revealing the extent and intensity of the feeling against the Communists, may also tend to deepen the bitter internal struggle in France.

The Communists emerged from the balloting a bad second. Yet, comparatively speaking, they have revealed themselves to be in point of popular support not weaker but stronger than they were at the time of the general elections of last November.

THERE ARE reasons to believe that, upon orders from Moscow, the Communists sacrificed their political chances in order to create that economic confusion in France which Russia demands.

In calling a strike of subway and bus workers in Paris they made a move which they must have known would deliberately irritate the majority of voters. As a writer in Combat put it, on the eve of the elections: "When people are against a strike they vote Right."

The people of Paris did just that, the Gaullists polling heavily even in metropolitan areas where the Communists have hitherto had it all their own way.

The reply of the Communists to the emergence in France of a large and powerful anti-Communist movement has now been to order the subway and bus strike in Paris to continue and to threaten more strikes.

To Moscow nothing is more important at this moment than to wreck the Marshall Plan. In the effort to achieve this aim they have unwittingly and no doubt unwillingly catapulted General de Gaulle, the leader of the anti-Communist forces, into a position of prestige and political potency he has not enjoyed since he left the government in January, 1946.

De Gaulle is not only anti-Communist and anti-Soviet but now also pro-American. He was not always thus. For a long time he took the position that France should play the role of balance wheel between Russia and America. He has abandoned that idea.

Last Sunday's election in France was thus far more than a struggle over municipal posts. It was an incident, a very important incident, in the struggle between the two world titans.

Within France itself, it presages an intensification of social conflict. With the middle groups now shrunken in size (despite the success of the Socialists in doing better than holding their own) there is no longer an adequate buffer between extreme Left and the new Right.

Communists Plan to Organize 'Cominform' in November

Belgrade, Oct. 20 (U.P.). — Top Communist delegates from nine European nations will meet in Belgrade before the end of November to organize the Communist "information bureau" and set the wheels in motion to coordinate Communist policies throughout Europe, an authoritative source said today.

The meeting will devote most of its time to organizational matters and will set up the permanent secretariat of the "Cominform," with permanent headquarters in Belgrade.

The information bureau was launched last month in Warsaw to combat the Marshall Plan in Europe and the "imperialist" policy of the United States.

The Communist parties which will be represented in the Cominform are those of Russia, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, France and Italy.

Agencies Tighten Up On Sick Leave

FEDERAL AGENCIES are tightening up on the use of sick leave by their employes.

Admittedly, the campaign is aimed at preventing congressional criticism and action by the Congress that would penalize all employes because a small minority abuse sick leave privileges. Two congressional committees—the Senate Appropriations and the House Civil Service—are investigating the annual and sick leave systems.

Kluttz

An action by Civil Service gives each agency the authority to require a doctor's certificate from any employe for sick leave taken, no matter how small. Formerly, no doctor's certificate was required for less than three days of sick leave.

A check yesterday showed that most agencies would take advantage of the order to crack down on employes whom they suspect of taking advantage of the 15-day annual sick leave privilege. Employes who have good leave records won't be affected by the new order in most agencies.

Meantime, it was reported that several agencies recently have sent investigators to the homes of employes who call in sick to check up on them. Other agencies are requiring employes who are out sick to call in at an early hour. Otherwise the time will be charged to annual leave.

The Government may go further to crack down on sick leave abusers. One plan proposes: an official reprimand for the first abuse; three days on leave-without-pay for the second offense, and firing for cause for the third violation.

COMING EXAMS: In about two weeks the Civil Service Commission will announce an exam for elevator operators' jobs in this city. The positions pay from $1690 to $1822 a year. Some 300 war service appointees hold elevator operator jobs here now. The elevator jobs are restricted by law to veterans. But applications will be accepted from nonveterans. Veterans, however, will be given preference for the jobs . . . An exam for research psychologists also will be announced next month. The jobs will pay from $3397 to $4149.

REPLACEMENTS: Civil Service has ordered the firing of war service and temporary employes here in these jobs: draftsmen in grades SP-3 to SP-8, and statistical draftsmen in grade CAF-2 to CAF-7.

The jobs will be filled before January 14, 1948 by persons who qualified in the draftsman exam given last year. War service and temporary people who passed this exam will be eligible for permanent appointments.

ARMY: It has competitive tests open for a number of jobs in Army agencies in this area. Among them are: blacksmith, brickmason, cabinetmaker, carpenter, heat and refrigeration mechanic, machinist, painter, pipefitter, plasterer, plumber, roofer, welder, woodworker, furniture repairman, roads and grounds foreman, shipping foreman, labor foreman, and electrician. Full information on these and other jobs is available in Room 2E-1030 of the Pentagon Building, or at the Civil Service Commission.

PEOPLE: M. C. Baron of the Federal Trade staff, is the new chairman of the Federal Trial Examiners conference. . . . Clayton Miller, top Commerce economist, has an attractive offer to join the United Nations staff . . . Mathias J. Johnson has retired after 30 years of civilian service with the Army. He has served in the Finance Office from the time it was created in 1920. He now plans to visit all parts of the United States.

JOBS: The Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive exams for these jobs: Hearing examiner, to pay from $4902 to $9975 to start, and astronomer, $3397 to $7102. No written test will be required for either job. Applicants will be rated on their experience and background.

The hearing examiner jobs are an outgrowth of the Administrative Procedure Act which provides for public hearings of certain actions by Federal agencies. Even though the examiners will be employed by the agencies themselves, they will be under the direct supervision of the Civil Service Commission. Civil Service, for example, will have the power to promote and fire them.

INTERIOR'S Geological Survey is in the market for engineering aides to work in its topographic section. The jobs pay from $2168 to $2644. Make application in room 6236 of the Federal Works Building.

OFFICE OF EDUCATION has made these appointments to its staff: Don S. Patterson of Blaine, Wash., Homer H. Kempfer of Prairie Home, Mo.; Arthur L. Benson of Easton, Md.; Pietrina T. Bertolini of Boston, Willis C. Brown of Arlington, Mass.; Silas M. Ransopher of Alexandria, Va., and Hartman C. Dignowity of Houston, Tex.

GOP Leaders in House Agree On 'Split Income' Tax Benefits

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Top-ranking House Republicans are informally agreed on writing "split income" tax benefits for husbands and wives into a 1948 version of the four billion dollar Knutson tax reduction bill.

This was learned last night as a special ten-man advisory committee of non-Congressional tax experts arranged to meet today on a longer-range over-all revision of the tax structure.

The "outside" advisory group was believed almost certain to recommend that married couples in all states be permitted to split income for Federal tax purposes. This privilege is now confined to the 13 community property states.

Committee Must Act

Formal announcement of the plan to combine split income benefits with a revision of the old Knutson tax cut rates, and speed the bill to the White House before March 1, will probably await official clearance by the House Republican Steering Committee late in December. The idea is to pick up enough votes by the changes to override a presidential veto.

This strategy contemplates slower motion on the over-all revision bill aimed at removal of tax "inequities" and possibly tapping new sources. GOP leaders say they will press for passage of the latter measure before adjournment but concede action may be forced over until next session.

Congressional joint committee experts already have been asked for estimates on the tax cost of including split income benefits in the faster moving Knutson bill. The added revenue loss may run to six or seven hundred million dollars.

Experts also have been asked to come up with estimates on the cost of removing estate tax hardships of which community property states have complained. While there is talk of also adding this second item to the revamped Knutson bill, some House spokesmen say that if estate tax relief is included at all, it will have to be added by the Senate.

To keepthe Knutson bill at the same four billion dollar tax reduction twice passed by Congress, and still provide additional relief for married couples, Republican taxmakers say there will have to be some adjustment in the Knutson tax cut rates.

New Schedule Needed

The new schedule is still to be worked out by the experts, but the tentative plan is to slightly modify the cuts in the middle brackets which will benefit most from "split income" relief.

The husband and wife feature, it was pointed out, will bring little if any benefit to couples earning less than $5000, nor does it help the top bracket groups. For this reason the old 30 per cent Knutson cut in in the lowest income brackets, and the 10½ per cent slash in the highest, are likely to remain much as they were in the two vetoed bills. The rate adjustments will come in between.

The ten-man group of "outside" experts meeting with Knutson today isn't concerning itself much with "quickie" bill strategy. Instead, the group headed by Roswell Magill as giving the whole tax structure a going over in an effort to write a more or less permanent law. Tentative findings on some items may be presented today but the committee may be another month preparing its final report.

U. N. Deadlock Continues on Council Seat

By a Post Reporter.

Flushing Meadows, N. Y., Oct. 20.—After 20 days and 11 ballots the United Nations General Assembly today is still deadlocked on a choice between the Ukraine and India for a seat on the stalemated Security Council.

The tenth and eleventh ballots today failed to give either candidate the necessary two-thirds majority, and the United States delegation still refused to support the Ukraine.

The tenth ballot gave the Ukraine 29 votes and India 24. A majority of 35 was needed. The next ballot gave Ukraine 30 and India 25.

Any hopes that the delegates could compromise on another candidate was shattered when Jan Masaryk, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia announced:

"I have been instructed by my government to declare that Czechoslovakia is not prepared to figure in any future combination as far as membership on the Security Council is concerned."

Mrs. Roosevelt Loses to Reds In U. N. Clash

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Russia emerged on the winning side today after a clash with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, United States delegate, over application to nonself-governing territories of treaties prohibiting traffic in women and children.

The clash came after Britain asked the United Nations Assembly to reverse a Russian-sponsored committee decision calling upon colonial powers to apply white slave prohibitions to their nonself-governing territories.

The Asssembly defeated the British proposal, 23 to 22.

The British measure would have made the treaties on traffic in women and children applicable in nonself-governing territories subject to approval of these territories instead of automatic.

Mrs. Roosevelt said the United States supported the British proposal because it felt that members of tthe United Nations should "develop the practice of consulting with these territories before such conventions are made applicable to them."

Transit Fare Hike Sought

of weekly passes was boosted from $1.25 to $1.50.

A firm spokesman said that the present pass system could be withdrawn without formality of a PUC hearing, since it was instituted voluntarily in 1933.

Anticipates More Deficits

Reporting a decline in passenger revenues for September as compared with June figures, Heberle anticipated deficits for December, January, February and March, as well as for July, August and September.

He pointed out that any wage award of the arbitration panel will be retroactive to July 1. Thus, he said, "we're already affected" by it.

The union is seeking a 35 per cent wage increase, in addition to improved sick leave, vacation and other benefits.

Heberle submitted figures giving estimates of the firm's net income with present wage schedules, for the 12 months ending September, 1948.

October, $72,040; November, $57,419; December, —$23,607 (deficit); January, —$11,200 (deficit); February, —$36,600 (deficit); March, —$21,600 (deficit); April, $30,500; May, $36,400; June, $19,100; July, —$24,300 (deficit); August, —$58,400 (deficit); September, —$4800 (deficit).

He estimated the firm's total net income for the year cited would be $34,952, which a union official said was less of a return than the PUC considered "fair and reasonable."

Arnold Fare Increases Are Put Into Effect

Arnold Bus Lines' recently authorized 5- and 10-cent fare increase became effective at 2 this morning, affecting bus service to Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Virginia.

The fare increase, authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission October 2, but delayed on October 10 until today, will apply to all Arnold routes with the exception of the following:

The Washington to Pentagon route; Washington and the Virginia ends of the Arlington Memorial Bridge and the Highway Bridge, and points on Arlington Ridge rd., including Navy Annex. Fares to these points remain 10 cents.

Also unchanged is the 15-cent cash fare to and from Fairlington via Shirley hgwy., and present fares to and from Fairfax, Va., and intermediate points over Chain Bridge.

Sasscer Sees Loans Preventing War III

Representative Sasscer (D., Md.) said today that further United States loans to European countries "may make them self sustaining and may prevent World War III."

Sasscer, just returned from an 18,000-mile trip through Europe with members of the House Armed Services Committee, told a reporter that American aid should be based on provisions that European nations "do as much as they can to help themselves."

New York Cotton

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Cotton futures were firm today on broad trade and commission house buying. Gains extended to $1.80 a bale before the market eased partially on hedging and profittaking. Final prices were 35 cents to $1.25 a bale higher. Mills, in anticipation of a tightening supply situation covered a heavy volume of contracts against textile sales. This was augmented by covering of about 20,000 bales against Government cotton purchases. Traders estimated about 90,000 bales have not been covered in futures against the recent CCC purchase of some 115,000 bales of cotton for Japan.

Cadillac

BACKGROUND

Throughout the years of automotive history, numerous cars have made serious bids for quality supremacy. But only Cadillac has remained exclusively in the finest-car field. Never has Cadillac allowed its name to be attached to a car of other than the highest quality. As a result, no other manufacturer can match Cadillac's forty-five years of quality experience.

If you are waiting for a new Cadillac—please be assured that every effort is being made to further production. Demand is so great, however, that some delay in delivery is still inevitable. But hold to your purpose! There is no substitute for a Cadillac.

Woodward's Sales Mount As Net Drops

By S. Oliver Goodman

Sales of Woodward & Lothrop increased $3,284,115 but net earnings dropped $320,765 in the fiscal year ended July 31, 1947, President Andrew Parker reported yesterday at the annual stockholders' meeting.

Andrew Parker

The session, in the department store's offices at 11th and F sts. nw., was attended by 75 stockholders. This was an unusually large turnout and apparently interest was heightened by hopes that a new plan for conversion of 7 per cent preferred stock might be outlined.

In answer to a stockholder's question from the floor, Chairman of the Board B. W. Parker said the management is working on a new conversion plan which is "expected to be submitted to shareholders about January 19, 1948." Woodward's trustees previously had withdrawn a proposal to convert the 7 per cent preferred into 4 per cent preferred, after some common shareholders protested the giving of one and one-fourth shares of new stock for each share of old preferred.

In his annual report Andrew Parker said net earnings of $984,357 in the 1947 fiscal year compared with $1,505,123 in the previous 12 months. Net was equal to $3.38 a common share against $5.46 a share in the 12 months ended July 31, 1946.

He added that the retail business in general is in a "difficult transitional period" with payroll and operating expenses still rising. Prices also are still on the increase, he said, and predicted that prices of shoes and men's suits will be higher next spring.

He declared that sales of the Pentagon branch store were well maintained during the past year, while sales in the Bethesda branch were affected by the new Maryland sales tax.

Comparative figures follow for two fiscal years:

Governors' Parley Hears Tuck Assail U. S. Spending

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 20 (AP).—Governors of 13 Southern States today threw their influence behind a broad regional system of higher education—for both whites and Negroes—as they studied ways of raising the South's educational level at their annual conference here.

Terming the South's educational problem its "most acute," the chief executives moved to:

1. Appoint a committee for immediate investigation of the establishment of regional specialized schools for both whites and Negroes;

2. Appoint another committee to visit privately endowed Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., which is furnishing the South many of its Negro doctors. That school thus would be used as a blueprint for regional schools for Negroes in law, dentistry and other fields.

Both proposals were presented to the conference by Governor Caldwell of Florida.

Under the proposed regional plan, which has been advanced by a number of educators and industrialists as the South's greatest need if its industrialization is to continue unimpeded, individual States would recognize certain graduate schools as leaders in their fields and would pool their resources toward further development of those schools on a regional basis.

Earlier, Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia assailed Federal expenditures of the last 15 years as a "wild orgy of spending which will eventually lead to national bankruptcy if not curbed."

Secretary of Commerce Harriman declared in an address that Russia has been waging a word attack on the nUited States since shortly after VJ-Day and that "the Communists believe in the inevitability of armed conflict."

Harriman, a former United States Ambassador to Moscow, added, however, "I am convinced that we can maintain peace provide dwe will now use our efforts to help free men attain their feedom . . ."

Franco Regime Bad But Harmless, Weddell Says

Lexington, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—The Franco regime in Spain was described today as "unqualifiedly bad, but about as dangerous to world order as a blank cartridge exploded in the center of the Sahara Desert" by Alexander W. Weddell, former United States ambassador to that country.

The retired diplomat, speaking at Washington and Lee University here, said he believed that "in time the Spanish situation will that "outside efforts to overthrow correct itself." But he warned Franco, if successful, will not only plunge that country into another civil war with further loss of life and property, but furthermore will simply open the gate for the entry into the Spanish peninsula of communistic influences."

"Of the two evils, I prefer the former, since I believe it has in it the seeds of its own redemption," Weddell declared.

Indian Knifed 2, Drank Their Blood, Police Charge

Lumberton, N. C., Oct. 20 (U.P.).—A 33-year-old Indian was jailed on assault charges today after two other Redmen told police he ripped their bodies with a knife and drank their blood.

James Bledsoe was arrested.

James Jacobs said Bledsoe stabbed him in the chest, and pressed the blade against his neck to keep him from moving while he drank the blood from the spouting wound.

Jacobs said Bledsoe then attacked Lamar Locklear.

"I want some of your blood, too," he cried.

Locklear said Bledsoe cut him on the arm and pressed his mouth on the wound while holding the knife in Locklear's back.

Group Formed in Wisconsin To Back Wallace in Primary

Milwaukee, Oct. 20 (AP).—Formation of a "Wisconsin Citizens for Wallace" committee was announced today by John Gminski, who said he had been named the group's executive director.

The committee plans to enter a full slate of delegates in the spring presidential preferential primary committed to the candidacy of Henry A. Wallace.

According to Gminski, the organization was set up by a meeting of labor, farm, cooperative and Negro leaders from both parties who indorsed "the program enunciated by Henry A. Wallace for peace and a return to the policies of the late President Roosevelt."

Wallace has accepted an invitation to address the group at the Milwaukee Auditorium December 30, Gminski added.

Prof. Liner Haugen, chairman of the Scandinavian languages department of the University of Wisconsin, was named a co-chairman of the group.

Eisenhower Group Formed in Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Three Chicagoans announced today they have incorporated an "Eisenhower for President" group, the first such formal organization in Illinois backing Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The three, who were granted a corporation charted, were Bernard E. Epton, former Army captain; Joseph A. Moller, former Army colonel, and Harry G. Johnson.

Bernard Epton is a brother of Sol Epton, Chicago attorney and south shore civic leader who has been a Republican party worker for about 25 years.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE GAME OF THE WEEK in the East ought to be the thing at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, on Saturday, when Tom Hamilton takes his revivified Navy team onto Penn's home lot. Navy is aching to crock some big team hard, and in Penn it's meeting a big team, perhaps the East's best.

POVICH

That Penn is loaded was well known, even before the season opened. And there has been nothing to disturb that impression in Penn's first three games, with the Quakers bowling over Lafayette, 69-0; Dartmouth, 32-0, and Columbia, 34-14. That last score doesn't look good for Navy, inasmuch as there is a 13-6 item already in the records, showing that Columbia licked Navy.

Barring a victory over Army, there is nothing Navy cherishes more at this time than a victory over Penn. It would go far to rehabilitate the Middies as a football power, after a string of 11 straight defeats, broken finally last week by an impressive 38-19 triumph over Cornell.

Navy's football team never was as poor as its record. It always was known that some day when Navy clicked, some good club was in for a pasting. Cornell isn't one of the top teams, but Penn is. Against Cornell, Reaves Baysinger had a good day, his best performance of the season. He could take them a long way against Penn. It's not nice to say that Navy is obstinate-minded, perhaps, but this week the Middies have a one-track mind—beat Penn!

THAT MARYLAND team that went down to Duke and took a 19-7 beating last weekend may be the best team in the Washington area despite Georgetown's gratifying victory over Tulsa. Maryland could have held the score to 13-7 against Duke if Coach Jim Tatum had been of that mind, but he wasn't.

Tatum modestly takes the blame for the third Duke touchdown. "I called that pass play from our own five-yard line that they intercepted for a touchdown," he said. "The only way we could win was with a touchdown, and time was running out. If we were going to lose, the score doesn't make any difference, and we took a chance on getting the winning touchdown."

Maryland at any rate is the local team that is most pleasing to the eye. Tatum's T-formation features the quickest hand-off play extant, at a speed even the pros don't attempt. Lou Gambino lost no prestige because he didn't score against Duke after averaging three touchdowns in the Terrapins' first three games. He broke away for 62 yards, and had two gallops of more than 25 without scoring.

PLAYING LEFT END for Maryland is George Simler, who caught the touchdown pass from Vic Turyn that put the Terrapins solidly in the ball game, cutting Duke's lead to 13-7, in the third quarter. Simler is something of a personality on the Maryland team.

For one thing, Simler is 25 years old. He's a smashing good end, and Coach Tatum a few weeks ago came to the decision to move him to tackle, because of the greater need for strength at that spot. Then Tatum learned something about Simler.

Simler flatly refused to play tackle for Maryland. No coach was ever so stunned as Tatum. What he told Tatum was, "Listen, coach, I want to play end, not tackle. I don't like to play tackle. I like to play end. If I can't play end, I won't play anywhere. I'm 25 years old. I'm a major in the Regular Army. I didn't come to Maryland on a scholarship. The Army is paying me $500 a month to take special courses here. I don't have to play football."

Under the circumstances, Tatum was pleased to let him play end.

IT WAS GEORGETOWN that came up with the surprise victory of the week. After a distressing losing performance against St. Louis U., in which the Hoyas looked incapable of beating the itinky Dink A. C., they went to Tulsa and licked a team that was undefeated on its home field since 1944.

More than that, Georgetown held scoreless a Tulsa team that had not failed to score in its last 60 ball games. Sports Editor Bus Ham reports that Georgetown's line represented the difference. He was high in the praise of the Hoya guards, Elmer Oberto and Dick Werder; the two massive tackles, 248-pound Primo Ricca and 220-pound Lewis Robustelli, and a flock of big, fine ends.

The fact is that Georgetown's line hasn't been scored against this season. Both Wake Forest and St. Louis beat the Hoyas on passes. At Tulsa, Georgetown kept the Oklahomans outside the 25-yard line.

Lions Home After Rocky Road Trip

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

One bright spot of news to temper their two defeats on the road may serve to spark the Washington Lions as they face the New Haven Ramblers tonight on the Ulline ice.

American Hockey League President Maurice Podoloff announced yesterday that the fogged-out Lions-Hershey game last Friday night will be replayed from scratch on Tuesday night, November 4.

This is a break for the Lions, as they trailed the defending champion Bears, 1-0, when the misty contest was called in the second period.

Riley Has Hopes

Coach Jack Riley is hopeful that the Lions will regain their scoring eyes tonight against the Ramblers. Aside from Johnny Carr-Harris, who has scored four of the seven goals the Lions have netted to date, the offensive play of the team has been woefully weak.

Since the four-goal outburst in the final period of their opener with the Philadelphia Rockets, the Lions have scored three goals in 2½ games.

New Haven invades Washington loaded with players familiar to Washington fans. Seven members of the squad are former New York Rovers.

Sherman White, Ian Mackintosh and Chick Webster, wingmen; Center Jack Gordon and Defensemen Jack Lancien, Harry Bell and Steve Hyrmnak are graduates of the Rover farm.

Gordon Bell, the Lions' goalie, was subjected to a terrific barrage while the team was on the road. Against Pittsburgh, Bell stopped 55 shots as the Lions lost 5-0. Much more of that and they'll be billing him as the "Target for Tonight."

That's not a very good defense, either.

Michigan? Just 11 Guys to Illini

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP).—Their November 1 date with Michigan's pulverizing Wolverines doesn't scare the also-unbeaten Fightin' Illini.

In fact, Athletic Director Doug Mills of Illinois told the Herald-American Quarterback Meeting today that "it won't be any upset if Illinois beats Michigan."

That failed to smoke out any retort from Michigan's booming ambassador of good will, rotund Wally Weber, who also addressed the meeting.

Freshman Coach Weber, who pushes big words around as adroitly as he did opponents on Hurry-Up Yosts's last Michigan team in 1926, admitted the Wolverines, despite a dazzling offense and manpowere to burn, will have their fingers crossed at Champaign, Ill., a week from Saturday.

"We had definite title aspirations last season and Illinois fixed us in admirable fashion," roared Weber, who scorns a microphone as a public speaker.

"And then back in 1939 (Michigan's Tom Harmon era), Illinois smote us like a bolt out of the blue—that 16-7 defeat will never be forgotten by Michigan."

Will They Win Another

It's a Breeze for Middies With Penn, Irish, Tech, Penn State Coming Up

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Poor old Navy, which finally won a game after 11 unsuccessful tries, settled down today to combat what may be the most murderous schedule in collegiate football this fall.

"Pennsylvania . . . Notre Dame . . . Georgia Tech . . . Penn State . . . Army . . . "

Wave of sympathetic laughter rippled through the room as Commander "Killer" Kane, assistant athletic director at the United States Naval Academy, reeled off the list of Navy's remaining foes.

Except for Michigan, Texas, and perhaps one or two others, the suicidal list facing the Midshipmen sounded like a roll call of the Nation's top teams.

"Mostly what we need is a little confidence," Kane went on at the weekly luncheon of the New York Football Writers Association.

Actually, he said later, what Navy needs the most is to forget about that near-victory over Army in the closing minutes of the 1946 season when the greatest Army team of all apparently was saved by the clock. With the Navy goalward bound, the time ran out on an Army victory, 21 to 18.

Like any T-formation team, Navy's future hopes rest on its quarterback in the final analysis and that's a lad names Reaves Baysinger, son of the line coach at Syracuse and a born football player.

"Baysinger has some way to go to get up to his performance in the Army game last year," Kane said. "He is pressing too hard. His passes are a little too high and a bit too hard."

This was to be Navy's big year, despite its schedule, and the Navy coach, Capt. Tom Hamilton, trained his squad on the West Coast to have it ready for the opener at California. The Middies blew that one, 14 to 7, and lost to Columbia, 13 to 6, before recovering poise enough to tie Duke, 14 to 14.

Navy, winner of only one game in nine last season, whipped Cornell last week, 38 to 19, in the last game this year it can be reasonably expected to win.

"The tie with Duke was a great lift," Kane said. "We've been trying to restore their confidence ever since the opener."

Ensign Dick Duden, recently graduated Navy star who has been scouting Pennsylvania all season, said Navy's confidence was battered by that California defeat.

"We went out there with high hopes," he said. "Then we found California surprisingly strong and that defeat made a lot of difference for the next two weeks. I guess they realized then they couldn't carry o nfrom where they left off last year."

Getting them back on the track is Hamilton's job and it's a mean one with Pennsylvania coming up Saturday in the East's top game of the week.

All that's left after that is Notre Dame . . . Georgia Tech . . . Penn State . . . Army . . .

Al MacKenzie, Widely Known In Golf, Dies

Albert R. MacKenzie, 67, prominent Washington golfer and president of the Dupont Laundry, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital of a cerebral hemorrhage. He had been in a coma for three days.

Mr. MacKenzie, Middle Atlantic golf champion in 1923, was vice president of the District Golf Association and in line for the presidency next year.

During his long association with golf in the District, he won the Washington Golf and Country Club invitation tournament and other local tournaments. He was director of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association, member of the golf committee of the Columbia Country Club, and a member of the Cheyenne Country Club and Broadmoor Country Club of Colorado Springs.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, Mr. MacKenzie spent his boyhood in Colorado Springs. He came to Washington when 21 and in 1904 with his brother, Hugh, established the Dupont Laundry. He lived at 3248 Rittenhouse st. nw.

Active in Masonic affairs, Mr. MacKenize was a thirty-second degree Mason, a Shriner and a member of Almas Temple.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Jane MacKenzie; by a son, Roland, a golf professional in Baltimore; a sister, Mrs. George Ellis of Miami, and by his brother.

Funeral services will be private.

Mr. Dubofsky Speaks Up About His Hoya Linemen

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

GRAVEL-VOICED Mush Dubofsky has developed a corking good line and loves to spring it on anyone.

Dubofsky is not a glib-tongued Romeo with fast repartee. Instead, he's line coach at Georgetown University and a man with firm beliefs.

One of his strongest convictions is that the line he coaches this year is one of the best anywhere.

Barking orders with a voice that sounded like a cow stricken with croup, the one-time Hoya and New York Giant guard raised his bellow a couple of octaves and fairly screamed to newspapermen at yesterday's Hilltop session:

"Those boys showed 'em Saturday in Tulsa, didn't they?" I'll bet those cowboys thought they were hit by a bunch of broncos when our line smacked 'em."

Waxing more enthusiastic as the 25-odd behemoths under his direction went thundering over the practice field, Dubofsky pointed out that of the four touchdowns scored against Georgetown in their four games to date, not a one has been through the line.

Head Coach Jack Hagerty, who was spending his time with the backfield, came over to join in the praise of the Hoya line.

"They played beautfully as a unit for the first time this season against Tulsa and that's the chief reason we won the ball game," he said.

And if you think the Messrs. Hagerty and Dubofsky are inclined to be a bit partial to their own production, listen to what Peahead Walker, the Wake Forest coach, has to say about the Hoyas' boys up front.

"The best we've faced this year," commented Walker the other day. And his Wake Forest team, which was lucky to achieve a 6-0 victory over G. U., encountered stiff opposition in Clemson and North Carolina.

Dubofsky doesn't like to single individuals out for orchids, but he just can't contain himself when the talk gets around to his steller guard, Bus Werder.

"The smartest lineman I've ever coached," he said of the rock-ribbed, 210-pound Chicago senior.

"He's a coach on the field and if he doesn't make All-America, I'd like to see the two guys they choose above him. They must be supermen.

"Werder never gets tired, never gets hurt and is always outguessing the other club. He calls our defensive signals and

Payton, Still Unconscious, Will Lose Leg

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP).—Physicians attending George Payton, 24-year-old professional golfer from Newport News, Va., injured in an automobile crash, said today his condition remained too critical for them to forecast his future as a golfer.

If he recovers, they said, he will have to wear an artificial left leg and his playing will depend upon how well he adapts himself to the prosthetic device.

Payton has been unconscious in Presbyterian Hospital since he was injured October 9. He is being fed intravenously and his overall condition is poor, attending physicians reported. No change is indicated, they said, adding that he might live indefinitely without regaining consciousness

If his condition should improve to a point where surgery could be undertaken safely, the doctors said, his left leg would be amputated. They said a fracture of the leg was so severe that it cut off the blood supply to the limb but the seriousness of his general condition precluded any immediate attempt at surgery.

The Virginia State open championship also may have suffered a skull fracture when the automobile in which he was a passenger crashed into a railroad viaduct abutment on Chicago's West Side.

Ralph Guldahl, 35, Chicago professional golfer, and three sporting goods representatives were injured slightly in the crash. The others were Edward Wooley, 47, of Oak Park; Ben Kapp of Chicago and Reginald Speakman, 45, of Miami, Fla.

'Skins Fear Rosato Out Of Bear Tilt

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Back to town after a loss that dampened no one's spirit, came the Washington Redskins yesterday to receive one good and one doubtful piece of news.

Hugh Taylor, rookie end who couldn't take part in the 27-10 loss to the Green Bay Packers because of a cold, was declared in perfect shape and ready to take up the pass-catching slack in Sunday's battle with the Chicago Bears at Griffith Stadium.

On the other hand, Fullback Sal Rosato, flown back to Washington after the Packer tilt, was found to be suffering a severe back strain. His ability to play against the Bears was doubtful.

Nussbaumer Banged Up

Despite the vicious tackling of the Packers, Rosato was the Redskin major casualty. On the hurt list, however, was speedy Bob Nussbaumer with a bruised ankle and cleat cut in his leg.

It was Philadelphia's loss to Pittsburgh in another Sunday game that kept Redskin morale soaring . . . Strategists are sure the Steelers, now atop Eastern Division standings, aren't going anywhere, particularly after the 'Skins beat them . . . It's been figured out that Washington can wind up with an eight won and four loss record, easily good enough for the Eastern title and a match with the Western champ . . . In the West, where the best teams seems to be, at least three clubs may have a better mark than 8-4 . . . Those who have time to figure out such things say the reason the Cards, Steelers, Rams and Eagles are looking so good now is that their first choices in the player draft for years are finally clicking . . .

Those Officials

When officials at Sunday's Packer game, including Jim Beiersdorber, put on their own display of broken-field running by calling 19 penalties, one wag decided: "That must be the Beirsdorfer that made Milwaukee famous . . . The Packer triumph, taken in the fourth period after breaking a 10-10 tie, was credited to two things: penalties for roughing the kicker and too much time in the huddle . . . The first gave Green Bay a first down on its 47 instead of giving Washington the ball on its 27, to which point Eddie Saenz had run Jacobs' punt. Four passes later, the Packers led, 17-10 . . . The second penalty came as Dick Poillon kicked a field goal that would have cut the Redskin deficit to 13-17. It was voided and Poillon missed on the second try from the 23 . . .

In all, Washington missed at least three excellent chances to score . . . Nussbaumer, with a Packer around his neck dropped a 3d period pass on the goal line; Jack Jenkins made a first down in the same quarter on the Packer six and it was nullified by a back in motion; and it was after Saenz' 25-yard trip to the Packer 25 that one of Baugh's tosses bounced off Vince Pacewic and into the arms of Bob Fort, who went 68 yards to score.

Monaghan Beats Marino

London, Oct. 20 (AP).—Although he was knocked down twice by Dado Marino, Irish crooner Rinty Monaghan was awarded the 15-round decision over the Hawaiian and won acclaim virtually everywhere but in Britain as World's Flyweight champion.

The fight was billed as an 112-pound championship fight by Promoter Jack Solomons although former Titleholder Jackie Paterson of Glasgoww, had obtained an injunction to prevent the British Boxing Board of Control from immediately recognizing a new flyweight king.

The crowd paid up to $42 for seats and they booed lustily during the early rounds of the fight. Marino, who weighed 111 to 111 1/4 for his opponent, did his bit ot stir things up when he floored the Irishman for a seven count in the 11th round with a right hook to the body. Again in the last round Marino dropped Monaghan for a no-count with a right to the chin.

Besides the knockdown, the Hawaiian drew blood from the crooner's nose and from a cut over his left eye. Marino was the aggressor throughout and scored points with his infighting.

Flying Weather Comes From Behind to Take Laurel Feature

THE WASHINGTON POST
Tuesday, October 21, 1947

At Laurel.

Dear Folks:

Loyal Legion, by winning the Washington Handicap, earned an invite to the Pimlico Special. Only one race remains to be run which will make any additional horses eligible. That is the Gallant Fox Handicap to be the Saturday feature at Jamaica. Here's one for the books: A friend of mine made a $3 whip-saw bet last week. One horse won at 7-10; another broke down before the race was half over and the third finished second. My friend won $71.30 on the bet. How come? Give you the answer tomorrow. Betting here is above that of last year. Jockey Johnny Breen has been engaged to ride the Rokeby Stable's Invective in the Selima Stake Saturday. Don Padgett holds a lead of six winners over his closest rival for jockey honors. Greg Johnson is distributing stall applications for the 20-day December meeting at Charles Town. As far as purses are concerned, the wealth is being shared here. So far a total of 245 owners of flat runners and 15 owners of steeplechasers have figured in the purse distribution. Eddie Blind continues to do a bang-up job of starting the fields. So you on the rail . . . Bill.

Meetmenow, Runs Second, Lanlast 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 20.—With visibility perfect and the ceiling unlimited, Flying Weather came from behind to be a going-away winner of the Tidal Basin, feature of the Monday program here.

Racing in the colors of Dion K. Kerr, jr., of Washington, the 4-year-old led E. C. Allnutt's Meetmenow and Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Lanlast to the wire.

A crowd of 10,000 seeing racing under ideal conditions, made Bobanet, one-time stake horse, the favorite. This 5-year-old went nowhere in particular. Those who backed Flying Weather, ridden by Jockey Al Schmidl, collected at the rate of $10 for each $2 investment. Flying Weather was clocked in 1:12 4/5 for the six furlongs.

Meetmenow Second

Stanley, Meetmenow and Lanlast did most of the early running with Bobanet within striking distance along the inside rail.

However, Schmidl brought Flying Weather around the leader and sent him along to win under good handling. Meetmenow lasted to be second ahead of Lanlast.

The daily double paid $179.60. The pay-off on the 9 and 10 combination was not made until after the stewards had weighed a foul claim against J. A. Bell, jr.'s Count Display, the $12.40 winner of the second race.

Count Display slightly bothered A. Klee's Casein which finished second and Jockey Don Padgett claimed a foul against L. Buttler. It was overruled.

Mix Man Wins First

The first race went to C. Bordonaro's Mix Man. A $21.40 shot, ridden by Apprentice C. Martens.

Horses and riders fell all over the infield in the day's steeplechase without serious injury. John Bosley, jr., riding his own Fieldfare, won with plenty of daylight to spare with Mrs. Van Brann's Parader second and Robert A. Chapman's Bail Me Out third.

King Ranch's Airosa upset the dope bucket when she won the Mall, the day's secondary feature by a scant nose over the odds-on favorite, Brookmeade Stable's Inheritance. The winner paid $15.20 and was well handled by Jockey Buttler who was riding his second winner of the day.

Drach Named Captain Of Terps for VPI Tilt

College Park, Md., Oct. 20 (AP).—Joe Drach, University of Maryland tackle, will be game captain when the Terps tackle Virginia Poly at Blacksburg on Saturday, Coach Jim Tatum announced today.

Drach is a junior and hails from Philadelphia.

Tatum Shows Modesty Over Duke Defeat

Coach Jim Tatum, whose University of Maryland Terrapins were on the losing end of a 19-7 football contest with Duke Saturday, is not blaming his players for the defeat.

"Duke was better coached and better conditioned than our boys," he said.

Maryland had the advantage in the game statistics in almost every department but touchdowns.

Mr. Dubofsky Speaks Out

I haven't seen him make a bad move all year, He's great."

"Shortstuff" Werder is the smallest man among the linemen who see most of the action. The ends, Fran Desmond, Al Sarashevitz, George Benigni and Bill Dugan, weigh at least 200 pounds apiece and are six-footers are more.

"And don't forget that those ends played a rugged ball game against Tulsa, too," chimed in George Murtagh, the end coach. "They played a smashing, driving game."

Tommy Dolan, Lou Robeselli, Jim O'Keefe and Jimmy Ricca divide up the tackle duties and the Hoya coaches have no complaints from them. At center, Bob Kelly, who hits an even 200, has the job pretty much to himself.

"That's the way linemen should be, big, rangy and fast," concluded Dubofsky. "Most of these kids are just sophomore coming into their own. Watch 'em next year."

In case you don't wait until next year, you have an opportunity to see the group this Friday night at Griffith Stadium where the Hoyas entertain N.Y.U. in a homecoming game.

Wake Forest, Devils Meet for Lead

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—Duke's Devils may have kept Maryland's Lu Gambino from going over the final stripe for the first time this season Saturday, but the galloper from Baltimore had no trouble holding onto the Southern Conference individual point-making lead.

Gambino's 48 points, all scored in the Terps' first three contests this year, were double those tallied by the runners-up in tthe touchdown-making parade, William and Mary's Fullback Jack Cloud. Cloud had shoved over four touchdowns in the Indians' four games.

In third place was Stan Magdziak, William and Mary's kicking and passing speecialist, who had 20 points. Magdziak led the league in extra points, having booted 14. oo?ttetaoin etao toiaeni eeeeeottttt

This week's top game will be played Saturday at Wake Forest, where the Wake Forest Deacons, who are leading the coonference race with three triumphs against no defeats, tackle the unbeaten Blue Devils from Durham. Duke, tied by nonconference Navy, was sharing the league's second spot with Washington and Lee, both elevens having registered two loop wins.

Cavaliers Run Wild In First 4 Games

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—Not since the days of All-America Bill Dudley have the Univerrsity of Virginia Cavaliers threatened to dominate the State collegiate football picture as they did today.

Coach Art Guepe's brilliant young charge were the only remaining undefeated college eleven in the Old Dominion. The Cavaliers had scored the most points—153 in four gomes— and were all tied with William and Mary's Indians as far as defensive honors were concerned, each team having yielded 27 points.

The Cavalier's Halfback George Grimes of Tazewell, was setting the pace in the individual point-making parade, having gone across the goal line three times for touchdowns and converted 15 times from placement for a total of 33 points, three more than a teammate, Johnny Papit, the freshman star from Philadelphia, had made.

Virginia has stacked up a 33-13 triumph over George Washington, has beaten Virginia Tech, 41-7; easily trounced Harvard, 47-0, and last Saturday posted a 32-7 victory over Washington and Lee's Generals.

This is the week of the football doubleheader at Lexington, where Washington and Lee's gridmen will tangle with Davidson's Wildcats, fresh from their 49-0 win over Hampden-Sydney, at Wilson Field at 11 a. m. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock, Virginia will battle Virginia Military Institute, smarting from Saturday's 21-20 spanking by the University of Richmond. Both Washington and Lee and Virginia Military will be observing homecoming celebrations of their own.

Prisoner Dies Without Aid

said she called police of the Fifth Precinct to request hospitalization for Reynolds.

Henry C. Belville of 437 15th st. se., who described himself as a "long-standing" friend of Reynolds, said he twice talked with police of the First Precinct over the telephone, Sunday, and asked them both times to send Reynolds to the hospital.

Belville said he told police Reynolds complained of a pain in the chest, but admitted that he, himself, believed Reynolds' pains were "from his three-week binge." He said police told him they couldn't hospitalize a man for "an alcohol cure."

Bellville's wife, Helen, reported she had called police of the Fifth Precinct on Friday night seeking hospital aid for Reynolds. She said police suggested he "sleep it off" at the Belville home.

Reynolds was described as a member of a family "of good standing" in Huntington, W. Va. A brother is an athletic instructor at a private school there, and a sister is a Huntington schoolteacher.

The family said he "adopted" the name of Chapman after living for several years with an uncle of that name.

Reynolds roomed with the Bellvilles up to "a few weeks ago," they said, and it was their address police listed for the prisoner. He was arrested at 3 p. m. Saturday when he was found sprawled in an areaway in the 700 block of 5th st. n.w.

Officer Tells of Arrest

Pvt. Everett S. Kirkpatrick, arresting officer, said he aroused the obviously intoxicated man and that the prisoner walked unaided to the patrol wagon the patrolman had summoned.

The Belvilles said Reynolds spent Friday night with them because of his condition; that he complained of pains in the chest and asked for a chest rub. It was after that, Mrs. Belville said, that she called the Fifth Police Precinct and asked that he be hospitalized.

"They sent one policeman over," Mrs. Belville said, "but he went off duty before he could secure an ambulance. After midnight, two more policemen came and suggested that Charley stay with us and sleep it off."

Periodic Drinker

On Saturday morning, the husband said, he gave Reynolds taxi fare home.

Belville said he received two calls on Sunday from police saying that Reynolds wanted him to come over and bail him out for $10.

"I told them no, that he'd only get drunk again and that what he needed most was hospitalization."

Belville said Reynolds went off on periodic drinking spells "lasting three to six weeks."

"Then he wouldn't touch a drop for maybe as long as a year," he said, adding that he had known Reynolds "since 1933 or 1934."

Jailed Man Dies of Injury to the hospital. He said that his heart and blood pressure were normal, and added that Pies had walked into and out of the hospital unaided and had talked with him during the examination.

"His condition appeared to be normal, or I wouldn't have let the police take him to the jail," he said.

Dr. Fawcett also said that a contusion over Pies' left eye appeared to be superficial. Police commented that he had "a very black, swollen left eye" when admitted to the jail.

The body was taken to the William Reuben Pumphrey Funeral Home, 7557 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda.

Choice of Clay Came as News to Roosevelt not change my mind, he asked that I suggest a successor.

I recommended Judge Fred M. Vinson, who had succeeded me as head of the Office of Economic Stabilization. The President indicated agreement and said we could discuss it when he returned.

The President was unusually nervous the day of his return. During our talk he told General Clay he was glad he was going to Germany and he wanted the general, who was an engineer, to know of his idea of establishing a TVA in central Europe to develop greater electric power and relieve Europe's chronic coal shortage. Clay stood at attention. The President did not give him a chance to say a word, and as soon as the President had finished Steve Early came into the room. I knew the President was behind his schedule and asked Clay to wait outside for me.

I remained for a few minutes to ask about Vinson and the President told me he would appoint Vinson, and asked me to talk to him because he had a number of engagements to fill before leaving that afternoon for Warm Springs. He would telephone Fred later in the day.

WHEN I LEFT the President's office and rejoined Clay, I said jokingly:

"General, you talk too much."

"Mr. Justice," Clay replied, "even if the President had given me a chance, I doubt that I could have talked to him because I was shocked at his appearance."

Clay had not seen the President for some time. For 41 crowded, exciting months, I had been at work in the White House and, because I saw him frequently, I did not realize, as Clay did, the change in his appearance. Although, when we parted, I had felt that an eventful chapter in our relationship was ended, I certainly did not appreciate that for him the end of life's journey was only a few days away.

Expected 'Comeback'

While waiting for Judge Vinson's appointment to be confirmed, I talked to the President on our direct line to Warm Springs several times and he professed to be feeling much better. I concluded that he was staging a "comeback" as he had done on many previous occasions.

On April 8, I returned to Spartanburg, where the friendly people who are my neighbors gave me a warm welcome. Four days later, with millions of people all over the world, I was stunned by the radio announcement that President Roosevelt was dead.

The Secretary of the Navy, James V. Forrestal, telephoned that he was sending his plane to Spartanburg to bring me to Washington because he thought I might be of some service during the next few days and he knew I would want to attend the President's funeral.

EARLY THE NEXT morning I called to see President Truman. He was overwhelmed by the responsibilities suddenly thrust upon him but was rapidly familiarizing himself with the status of pending problems. That afternoon I returned to the White House and he requested me to ride with him the next morning to meet the train bringing the body of President Roosevelt, and to accompany him on the sad journey to Hyde Park.

Talk With President

On the train returning to Washington the President and I discussed many matters. As I had been out of the White House only a few days, I was able to acquaint him with the status of many serious problems in our foreign and domestic relations. In the course of this conversation the President said he would like me to attend the forthcoming United Nations Conference in San Francisco as his representative.

"Mr. President, I appreciate your suggestion very much, but I don't think you ought to send me," I replied. "The delegation already is appointed. It is a representative group and includes some very able people. Experience has shown that a personal representative of the President under such circumstances usually causes great dissatisfaction in a delegation. Almost invariably relationships become more personal than representative." President Truman agreed.

The following day he told me he wished to appoint me Secretary of State. I did not want in time of peace to be head of an agency considering reconversion problems but I did want to take part in the making of the peace. I said I would accept the appointment, and we agreed that neither the change nor the announcement should be made until the end of the San Francisco Conference which was just about to meet.

Mr. Byrnes called the Yalta Conference in February, 1945, "the high tide of Big Three unity," and the next chapter of his book is called "The Tide Begins to Turn." During the spring and early summer of that year, difficulties with the Russians began to multiply, many of them over the destiny of the countries in eastern Europe which had been occupied by the advancing Red Army. What happened in Romania is the subject of the next installment of "Speaking Frankly," which will be published tomorrow.

Employers Charge ITU Coercion

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP).—The Graphic Arts League contended before a National Labor Relations Board examiner today that "conditions of employment" laid down by the International Typographical Union constituted a threat to employers.

The statement was made by F. E. Street, executive secretary of the league, under cross-examination at the hearing in which the ITU and its Baltimore Local 12 are accused of failure to bargain collectively in good faith.

Gerhard Van Arkel, ITU counsel, had referred to a part of the NLRB complaint that the unions coerced and restrained the league, which is composed of 22 printing firms in the city.

Van Arkel asked if there had been any threats or coercion, to which Street replied that the conditions of employment given to him by Charles V. Brannock, president of the local, require that foremen be members of the union. By such action, he said, the union would be setting up a closed shop and forcing it upon employers.

Earle K. Shawe, league attorney, interposed, "we think that a union which embarks on such a policy is coercing."

Street said that there was a threat in the conditions of employment given to the league by Brannock "that we must employ union members. I consider it a threat when representatives of a union tell us that all men will walk off the job."

During the testimony Street read from a postcard which he said had been sent to union members. It read:

"If it becomes necessary to leave your job, make no statement to employer, conciliator or anyone else as to the reason. You will strike or quit work because you do not want to work for a particular employer or you do not want to work at all; you will be refraining from working because you want to do so and for no other reason.

"If an employer indulges in practices that make you unhappy, he is lowering efficiency. He ought to know that a union man with worries is less efficient than a stenographer in love."

Big Toe Also Points to Body Heat Trends

Yosemite, Calif., Oct. 20 (AP).—The human body contains a thermostat and the big toe is the indicator, Dr. L. H. Newburgh of the University of Michigan medical school, reported today.

When the air temperature drops to a certain point the thermostat begins to shut off the bodily heat going to the arms and legs.

This is why a person's toes and fingers often are the first to feel the cold.

The thermostat does this to conserve the heat necessary to maintain the interior of the body at a constant 98.6 degrees, which is essential to the smooth functioning of the vital organs.

Doctors who understand this interesting heat-control system can detect hyperthyroidism or other evidence of abnormal metabolic activity simply by noting temperature changes in the big toe, Dr. Newburgh said.

12 Educators Begin Studying Washington-Lee High School

A committee of 12 educators yesterday began a week's study of the Washington-Lee High School, Arlington, designated as one of 20 "representative" schools to be evaluated by the State Department of Education.

Purpose of the evaluation program, school officials said, is to determine the educational levels of secondary schools throughout the State. A full report will be available to the State board and to the schools affected at the conclusion of the survey.

Basis for the survey will be "evaluative criteria" developed by the Cooperative Study of Secondary School Standards to determine the effectiveness of present-day curricula. L. H. McCue, jr., principal of the E. C. Glass High School, Lynchburg, is acting as chairman for the study.

Other members of the evaluation committee include:

J. B. M. Carter, superintendent of schools in Powhatan County; Cassell Donahue, principal of the Hopewell High School; Arley O. Hutton, director of instruction for the Charlottesville school board; Luther G. McRae, principal of Falmouth High School; J. S. Mallenes, assistant superintendent of schools at Hopewell; C. W. Miller, general supervisor of schools at Fredericksburg; Dr. Edward Overton, professor of education at the University of Richmond; Howard R. Richardson, principal of the Falls Church High School; W. W. Robinson, principal of Radford High School; F. B. Smith, jr., principal of Warrenton High School, and Edwin E. Will, principal of Timberville High School.

3 Reported Admitting Pennsylvania Thefts

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 20 (AP).—State Policeman Joseph Pochyba said today three men arrested Friday night near Shamokin, Pa., have admitted a series of robberies in central Pennsylvania.

Pochyba identified the men as Edgar C. Via, 28; his brother Leonard, 21, and Dorsey C. Calp, 24, all of Baltimore.

Pochyba said the trio told him Via and Calp escaped from the Culpeper, Va., prison camp on September 16, had joined Leonard Via, later participating in several robberies.

WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1947

Special Clinic For Drunken Cases Urged By Barrett

Police Chief to Tell Commissioners Plans Today for Proper Care of Inebriates

A proposal to set up a hospital clinic here to provide proper medical treatment for persons arrested for intoxication will be presented to the District Commissioners today.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, said he will meet with the Commissioners to suggest a clinic or ward at Gallinger Hospital. Health Officer George C. Ruhland and Dr. Alvin Sweeney, superintendent of Gallinger, are expected to attend.

Barrett revealed his plans after an autopsy disclosed that Charles E. Reynolds died of pneumonia in his cell at the First Precinct after being arrested on a drunkenness charge.

Persons who are picked up for intoxication would be examined at the clinic and left there for treatment until they are sober, Barrett said. They will not necessarily be charged with intoxication.

Hold Drunkenness Illness

"Intoxication is a form of illness. It needs medical treatment. Often there are complications with it. A policeman cannot determine always whether a man is sick or drunk when he has liquor on his breath," Barrett declared.

He said that internes at Gallinger Hospital have rejected prisoners after concluding they were drunk.

"Police have no choice then but to take prisoners back to a precinct cell and keep them there until they sober up. This is unfair to the prisoner and to the policeman," he said.

"Police have neither the time not the equipment to diagnose a case. They have no special skill in restoring a prisoner to health, even one who is drunk, and a drunken man is a sick man," he explained.

Barrett said that intoxicated men should be treated at hospital clinics until "ready to leave under their own steam." Proper treatment also would be given to sick persons, not intoxicated, but found dazed or unconscious with liquor on their breath, because their illness would be noticed at once, he said.

Bringing More to Hospital

Similar hospital clinics already exist in other large cities, he said. The clinic does not necessarily have to be steup in Gallinger Hospital, he declared. He said it could be either part of the police department or part of a proposed greater clinic for alcoholics.

Dr. Sweeney said that in recent months there has been a great increase in the number of prisoners brought out to the hospital for examination by police.

"They are bringing in all cases that look as if they need hospitalization. We take as many as we possibly can. But the hospital is crowded and we need a new clinic with observation wards," he said.

Barrett declared that a clinic would prevent future Bunch cases. John Forrest Bunch died at Gallinger Hospital August 4 of a fractured skull six days after he had been arrested on a charge of intoxication. His death was held accidental by a coroner's jury. His family has protested that he was injured while in police custody.

2 Are Held For Jury After Auto Chase

Two youths yesterday were held for the grand jury under $1000 bond each, charged with larceny of an auto which police reported had collided with six other cars during its "holiday."

Three other young men were steered into Municipal Court after they were apprehended by police in two separate jeep and truck chases.

Vernon L. Adams, 19, of 709 6th st. nw., and Samuel Jones, 19, of 509 H st. nw., were ordered held for the grand jury after First Precinct Pvt. Robert F. Seibert testified he found the youths in a car parked at 6th and G sts. nw. at 4 a. m. Sunday.

Was Reported Stolen

Seibert said the car had been reported stolen early Sunday from a parking lot at the rear of the District Building, where the owner, John G. Broums of 1725 Lanier pl. nw, had parked it late Saturday.

Harry S. Hawkins, 20, of 515 8th st. nw., and Durant Daniel, jr., 20, of 202 E st. nw., were held for the grand jury under $1000 bond each, charged with unauthorized use of a truck owned by Massino Ferrari, of 608 3d st. nw.

They were arrested after a chase yesterday at 2 a. m. Policeman Charles A. Morse said he saw the men tampering with a truck parked in the 200 block of G st. nw.

Taxi Commandeered

Morse gave chase in a citizen's car and en route, another patrolman, Pvt. Harold Hubbard joined in pursuit in a commandeered taxi. The truck was forced to the curb at 10th and H sts. nw.

The second chase at 3 a. m. involved Ernest Smallwood, 23, of 2030 D st. ne., held on charges of unauthorized use of a jeep and six traffic violations.

'Mooseburgers' Make Big Hit On D. C. School Lunch Menu

The Washington Post

TREAT FROM THE WILDS—Moose meat was on the menu at Lynden Hill School, Seat Pleasant, Md., through the generosity of two lucky hunters, and found "real good." Nancy Duehring, 13, of 4411 Silver Hill Road, who had not yet tasted her "mooseberger" when this picture was taken, watches Jack Kabat, 13, 6206 Ritchie Road, as he sinks his teeth into one

"Mooseburgers" were the order of the day at Lyndon Hill Junior High School, Seat Pleasant, yesterday noon.

Far from turning their noses up at the unique food, the kids came back for seconds. The meat was served on the regular 20-cent school lunch in the cafeteria.

Mrs. Richetta Hoover, manager of the cafeteria, said that it was the first time she had ever cooked or tasted moose meat. She added seasoning, some onions, and served the ground meat on buns—hence the "mooseburgers."

The kids verdict was that the meat war "real good," tastes "like hamburger, kind of . . ." they explained. About 150 of them tried it, according to Mrs. Hoover, who said that was the usual number served in the cafeteria.

The 18 pounds of moose meat served at the school were donated by William H. Limerick, 5020 Benning rd. se., and Irwin Main, 1011 F st., Seat leasant. They were members of a local party of hunters who returned from a three-week trip to Canada last week.

'Caveman' Wooing Tactics Lead to Indictment Here

"Caveman" tactics in romance resulted in the indictment yesterday of George P. Harding, 36, 5210 Fisher rd. se., on charges of kidnaping, assault with a dangerous weapon, assault with intent to kill, carrying a deadly weapon, assault wit ha pistol and simple assault.

Harding was accused of kidnaping Alsace Lorraine McCormick, 29, in Washington September 26, driving her into Maryland, and beating and threatening her until she promised to marry him. She was even beaten, she said, as she lay in a semiprivate ward at Providence Hospital.

According to police, Mrs. McCormick, who is estranged from her husband, was seated in a car with Leon Guervitz, 28, of 221 15th st. se., near her home at 24 8th st. ne., when Harding pulled up in another vehicle with two companions.

Mrs. McCormick said Harding forced her into his car at gunpoint. She asserted he struck her in the face with the weapon and slapped her repeatedly.

Harding's two companions, Edwin M. Sowder, 3420 P st. nw., and Frank R. Cady, 1234 34th st. nw., were dropped off at their own request and Harding continued to drive Mrs. McCormick into Maryland, it was said.

Finally, under threat of death, the young woman said, she promised to marry Harding, whom she had met in 1945, and he drove her to Providence Hospital. He told attendants there, she said, that she had been in an auto accident.

The next day he came to the hospital, Mrs. McCormick said, bearing flowers and candy. But the following day, he strode into the ward and beat her with his fists, she alleged.

Another occupant of the ward, Mrs. Mildred Bryant, 3137 Adams Mill rd., said she awoke when Mrs. McCormick screamed and saw the beating. Harding surrendered to police later.

Twenty-three other indictments were returned by the District grand jury with charged against eight ignored.

2 Workmen Saved From Cavein In Shoreham Hotel Basement

Two workmen, trapped in a cave-in of a soil fill in the basement of the Shoreham Hotel, escaped without injury yesterday, saved by the speedy efforts of fire truck and rescue squad men.

The men, Philip Gray, 48, of 445 Delaware ave. sw., and Calvin Terrant, 60, of 1226 Half st. se., were digging a tunnel to connect a hotel ballroom with the main building when an embankment gave way, pouring soil around them up to their chests.

Rescue Squad No. 2, Truck Co. No. 9 and Ambulance No. 2 responded to the emergency call shortly before noon. Under direction of Fifth Battalion Chief J. L. Werheim, the rescue men dug out the pair, while fellow laborers, employed by the Shoreham Hotel Corp., shored up the remaining fill.

Terrant was able to walk to the waiting ambulance, while Gray, who was pinned under by the soil for almost an hour, had to be carried on a stretcher. After X-rays at the Emergency Hospital, both were released in the afternoon.

Book Fair for Library Fund To Open at Cleveland Park

The Cleveland Park Book Fair, sponsored by the Cleveland Park Community Committee, will open at 9 a. m. today at the Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 3400 Lowell st. nw.

Begun last year to raise funds for equipping the community library, the fair is an anual event dedicated to the education of children. Washington authors and illustrators will present talks and "chalk talks" to the guests. Schedules have been worked out with District schools, enabling students to attend during school hours.

To augment the library fund, books selected by Miss Louise Latimer and Miss Ethel Bubb of the District Public Library, and Miss Nora Beust of the United States Office of Education, will be sold at the fair.

Among the speakers for today are Glenn Blough, author of "Monkey With a Notion" and "Beno, the Riverbug Mayor"; Capt. Frederick Bell, author of "Old Tales of the Navy," and Miss Barbara Nolen, editor of Story Parade, a children's magazine.

In addition, there will be a story-telling period from 4 to 5 p. m. daily, when members of the Story Telling League will tell folk and fairy stories.

Judge May Black-List Lawyers Who Refuse to Defend Needy

District lowyers who shun the penniless may find themselves blacklisted from more lucrative court appointments.

Judge Armond W. Scott of Municipal Court issued the warning late yesterday when he found himself faced with four clients asking legal advice and no lawyers around to assist them.

The lawyers were reportedly gathered at the United States District Court, where such court appointments more often net them clients who can pay for legal service.

Working late to clear an almost record roll of 107 drunks awaiting his decisions, Judge Scott was obviously nettled when he could find no lawyers presetn to give advice to those defendants requesting it.

Nathan Ironfield, court bailiff, was sent to round up some lawyers. He came back with the report:

"When I approach them, they walk away."

"Give me the names of any who refuse," said Judge Scott, "and when I'm sitting in United States Court I'll see that they are not called."

Suit Likely On Cash in Armory Use

'Friendly' Test of Ownership Set In D. C. Court After Meeting

District Court will probably be asked to decide whether the city or the National Guard should get the cash from entertainment events at the Washington Armory.

All that would keep the suit from developing would be a decision by the District Commissioners agreeing to the idea that the Guard should get the income from armory events.

Such, decision is unlikely. The Commissioners have insisted that the city should get some return on the money it spent to build the armory.

Conference Held

Probability of a legal suit developed yesterday after a conference between the Commissioners and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard at the District Building.

Following the half-hour meeting, Commissioner Guy Mason and General Cox announced that the next move will be for the general to send the Commissioners a statement of the legal basis for his view that armory income should go to the Guard.

If the commissioners fail to agree with Cox, Mason said, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West will be instructed to draw up the necessary papers for filing a "friendly suit" for a District Court decision on armory control.

Meanwhile the National Guard will hold on to the funds it is getting from armory events.

General Cox said he will file the legal statement with the Commissioners in the next two or three days.

$11,500 At Stake

At stake immediately in the decision is a total of at least $11,500. This includes $8500 fro the Washington Home Builders' show, and a guaranteed $1000 apiece from three dances to be held at the armory.

General Cox said the agreement for the dances calls for payment of $1000 or 15 per cent of the gross receipts, whichever is greater. He added that the agreement for the George Washington homecoming dance November 1, calls for delivery of 500 recruits for the Guard or of $900. The Guard wants the recruits.

General Cox said the Guard itself is planning a boxing show tentatively for November 14. He said that no contracts have yet been worked out for college and high school basketball games at the armory during the winter months. As a result, he said, no estimate is available of what will be the income this winter from events at the armory.

Coin Toss Won Bidder $117,000 Navy Contract

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—A man called—"heads"—on a coin and received a contract amounting to $117,000, it was revealed today.

A spokesman for Reynolds Metals Co. said it happened like this:

The Navy needed some aluminum tubing in a hurry for some constructoin and repair of planes at the Naval Aviation Depot in Philadelphia.

When bids weer opened there was a tie between the two lowest bidders, an din these cases the usual procedure is to flip a coin to decide who gets the contract.

The tie bidders were Reynolds Metals Co. and the Aluminum Co. of America, each with $117,000.

On the day set for the toss, John Blomquist of Reynolds met the Alcoa representative at the office of the Naval Aviation Supply Depot, a Navy official pot. A Navy official flipped a coin. Twice Blomquist called "heads" and won.

Gen. Warfield's Will Is Filed; Wallis May Share

Towson, Md., Oct. 20 (AP).—The Duchess of Windsor, the former Wallis Warfield of Baltimore, may eventually share in the estate of an uncle who died recently.

The will of Gen. Henry M. Warfield, former Maryland adjutant general and public figure, was filed today in orphans court with the estate valued in excess of $850,000.

The entire estate, with the exception of small grants to business associates and household employes, was left in trust for his widow. After her death it will remain in trust from which the net proceeds will be paid to his daughter, Mrs. Anita Warfield Lewis, for life.

The trusteeship will continue after the death of Mrs. Lewis, and the will directs the trustees to pay out several annuities and bequests to relatives including $15,000 to the duchess.

Va. Oyster Law Argued As Invalid

Circuit Court Told Statute Is Violation of Tongers' Rights

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—A Virginia seed oyster statute was attacked as invalid, unconstitutional and as giving the Commissioner of Fisheries "ungodly arbitrary powers" in arguments heard today by Judge Julien Gunn of Richmond Circuit Court.

Attorney Lee Ford, representing oystermen who are seeking an injunction against the Commonwealth, said the statute in question—Section 3218 of the Virginia code—places an unlawful and direct burden on interstate commerce, does not conserve the seed oysters, and allows the commissioner to "fatten the pockets of one party and dry the pockets of another through manipulation of the market price of oysters."

Complainants in this case are a Virginia oyster tonger, J. R. Haughton, of Warwick County; a New Jersey planter, Cornelius Campbell, who has entered into a contract to buy seed oysters from Haughton, and the Oyster Tongers and Seafood Workers Union, No. 265, AFL, Newport News.

They have named as defendants Attorney General Harvey B. Apperson and Charles M. Lankford jr., commissioner of fisheries.

The oystermen are protesting against an order handed down in September by Lankford who said that because of a depleted condition no permits will be granted for tonging seed oysters for sale outside Virginia.

Anacostia Is Inspected By Admiral

A three-day inspection of the Naval Air Reserve Unit, Naval Air Station, Anacostia, got under way last night.

Rear Admiral E. C. Ewen, USN, Chief of Naval Air Reserve Training, reviewed about 1000 officers and men of the station. The inspection, which will continue today with examination by Admiral Ewen and his party of materiel and facilities, is the first since the new Naval Reserve program began on July 1, 1946.

It is part of a Nationwide review of 22 Naval Air stations. More than 31,000 pilots and enlisted air and ground crewmen will compete for the Noel Davis and Edwin Francis Conway trophies. Discontinued during the war, the trophies are awarded to the station and squadrons with the highest efficiency, as determined by the annual inspection.

The Reserve Unit at Anacostia is under the command of Capt. Frederick Funke, jr., USN.

Tourist Camps Checked For Ohioan's Slayer

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP).—Police checked tourist camps along the Washington-Baltimore blvd. today in an effort to trace the slayer of Charles R. Vaughn, whose beaten body was found eight days ago in a Halethorpe tourist cabin.

Lieut. Joseph E. Sarsitis of the Baltimore county police said bus companies serving in the area also were being contacted.

The victim, an author and Boys Club leader from Pataskala, Ohio, left Ohio two days before his death to visit his publisher in Pennsylvania.

Wrist Radios Predicted Soon With Printed Circuits Utilized

A wrist radio, using the printed radio circuit developed for the armed forces during the war by the Bureau of Standards, is just around the corner, Bureau scientists predict.

Already the Bureau has made up samples of a transmitter similar in size to a cigaret pack and a receiving set about the size of a lipstick holder. Recently the Bureau used the transmitter in sending messages from within an automobile to the Bureau Laboratory.

Experts are now working on a combination of the transmitter and receiver for two-way conversations.

Smaller Sizes Hinted

Even smaller sizes are being hinted at—putting the transmitter into a package the size of a match box.

According to Air Force Brig. Gen. F. L. Ankenbrandt, who is cooperating with bureau scientists, this work is being speeded up to provide complete but small radio equipment for jet-propelled planes, where the air intakes take up the room formerly used for the larger radio equipment.

One project using the small printed circuit already is on the market. This is a hearing aid, developed at Peabody, Mass., by the Allen-Howe Electronics Corp.

Demonstrated for Scientists

The bureau's transmitter and receiving set, and the new hearing aid, in which all parts are contained in a pocket-sized case, were demonstrated last week to scientists at the Interior Department.

Government scientists were amazed that the first device for peacetime use of the printed circuit should be a hearing aid, Dr. Cledo Brunetti of the Bureau stated. A hearing aid requires many refinements not needed for other purposes.

CERAMIC WAFER—This young lady is holding the tiny ceramic wafer on which are "printed" the circuits that make new type hearing aids and wrist radios possible—this one is for a hearing aid. In the foreground is a jumble of 173 items that the printed circuit replaces

At present a small-sized radio is under development at several manufacturing plants. One, at Lakeland, Fla., expects to have its radio on the market within the next few weeks.

VFW Rejects Quick Debate On Textbook

Tells District School Board Its 20-Minute Offer Is Absurd

The Veterans of Foreign Wars yesterday rejected the District School Board's invitation for a 20-minute discussion on the controversial school textbook, "Building Citizenship."

The VFW's District of Columbia Department claims the book is "irreligious, un-American and pro-Communist."

In a letter yesterday to Mrs. Elize Z. Watkins, school board secretary, Albert M. Armstrong, department commander, said his organization will "take this case to a tribunal that will grant a full and adequate hearing on the merits of this issue."

The department had asked two hours to discuss the book, now in use in District schools.

"To grant 20 minutes for discussion covering the contents of this book is not only inadequate but absurd," Armstrong's letter declared.

His body was found about 9 a. m. today by men going to work. The body was taken to Luray, where funeral arrangements will be made.

Suspension Probe Pushed By Greenbelt

Council Acts After Stormy Session on Police, Fire Safety

The Greenbelt, Md., Town Council last night asked its public safety committee to investigate further the recent suspension of two policemen which allegedly, has left the town without adequate police and fire protection.

The action climaxed a heated debate in which a number of local residents assailed what they termed the "unfairness" of leaving the two officers under prolonged suspension. A number of citizens demanded that the council take immediate action by either dismissing the policemen outright or "clearing their names."

The suspended policemen are John Belton, who also doubled as fire chief to his suspension, and Robert Dodge. Both were relieved of duty by Town Manager James T. Gobbel in September. The town manager has not specified charges against the officers, pending final disposition of their cases.

Before requesting the further study of the suspension, the council received a report from the safety committee which described the present police protection as "not suitable for any extended period, but adequate for the time being."

The safety committee also found the effectiveness of the fire department unchanged, despite the penison of Belton. Its study showed that the total manpower of the forces is unaffected and that another competent officer has been placed in charge to succeed Belton.

Earlier, the council rejected a recommendation from Robert Watson that two members of the council be disqualified to sit on a special committee investigating the town administration.

Watson contended that Councilmen David Granahan and Allen Morrison were not eligible to sit in on the investigation, because they both previously had stated they favored retention of Gobbel, focal point of the proposed investigation. Both councilmen, in a heated verbal exchange with Watson, denied having committed themselves prior to the start of the probe.

The council also adopted a resolution accepting the offer of the Adjutant General of Maryland to allot the National Guard Field Artillery Battery to the town. The resolution authorized appointment of a five-man committe to confer with military authorities on proper steps for setting up the unit and conducting a promotional campaign.

Student With Paralyzed Side Gets One-Handed Typewriter

A 34-year-old Georgetown University law student, whose left side was paralyzed by a pistol bullet in Germany, yesterday received the first one-handed electric typewriter manufactured for the Veterans Administration rehabitation program.

Albin Ulrickson of 2517 Fairlawn ave. se., tried out the new machine at the regional office of the VA, 1825 H st. nw., and said he thought sufficient practice would enable him to type as well as people who have the use of both hands.

G. H. Harper, training officer of the VA, who worked with experts of the International Business Machines Corp. to develop the device, said four more of them have been ordered for disabled veterans here.

The keyboard contains letter keys in the right half of the four banks. The most frequently used letters are placed conveniently for the right index finger. Numbers and punctuation marks are on the left side. These key positions will be reserved in machines which will be used by left-handed disabled persons.

Where the normal typewriter has the space bar, the specially designed machine has two bars, one being the shift key. The return of the carriage when shifting to a new line is operated by touching a key on the right side of the board.

A graduate of Bethany College, Lindsborg, Kans., Ulrickson is in his second year of the evening law course at Georgetown. He entered the service in Fort Worth, Tex., where he was part owner of a 100-head dair[illegible]

Reasonable Phone Rates Asked in Plea For Increase

C&P Hopes Decision Will Not Be Based Upon Valuation Of Its Investment

Presenting its case for $2,018,00[illegible] in rate increases here, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co yesterday called for "reasonabl[illegible] rates" to enable it "to continue a successful business."

In contrast to previous hearings on other utility rates before the District Public Utilities Commission, the company expressed the hope that a rate decision would not be based on the value of the company's investment.

Instead, the company requested the PUC "merely to find and determine that the new rates . . . are neither unjust as to the customers, nor in excess of reasonabl[illegible] rates. . . ."

55-Cent Jump in Basic Rate

The proposed rate scale would increase the basic single-party line cost 55 cents, from $4.20 to $4.7[illegible]. The company estimated that the $2,018,000 in increases would add $1,123,229 in net income, based on the year ending September 3[illegible] 1947.

Opposition to the increase was expressed to reporters by a spokesman for the Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO; representatives of the Federation of Citizens Associations and Benjamin [illegible] Marsh of the People's Lobby. Only Marsh testified in opposition yesterday.

U. S. Files Petition

The Federal Government, largest customer of the telephone company here, filed a petition of intervention in the case through the Treasury Department. Department lawyers explained this merely gives the Government, which pays C. & P. an estimated $3,400,000 annually, the right to oppose the increase if it desires.

When the telephone company completed its presentation, after about four hours' testimony, PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan adjourned the hearing subject to recall when the PUC arguments and other groups' views in the case are ready, probably not before several weeks.

R. W. Michie, a telephone company vice president, disclosed to reporters that the telephone strike of last April and May caused the company's interstate business to show an actual loss of $2000 plus about $150,000 to $200,000 which the company would have made in profits.

He said the loss in interstate business was negligible, as most local phones are dial operated, and stressed that the company is "not asking to recoup any portion of the (strike-lost) money."

First Request in 20 Years

J. B. Morrison, vice president and general manager of the company, declared that the company has not sought a rate increase in 20 years. Since 1939, he declared, labor expenses have risen 235 per cent and total operating expenses 191 per cent.

"Despite the fact, however, that the company earnings are unsatisfactory, it is now faced with the largest outlay of capital in its history . . . gross additions of 70 million dollars over a five-year period, of which $14,500,000 is being added in 1947."

Morrison said that although the construction program yill produce added revenue, "the relationship that now exists between revenues and expenses would not be noticeably altered . . ."

Michie said that for the 12 months ended September 30, 1947, the company's intrastate business earnings, with which the rate hearing is concerned, were $2,060,251. Its net average investment, he said, is $53,272,481.

On the basis of current operating conditions, he said, return on this investment would be 3.26 per cent. During July, August and September, said Michie, net return dropped to 1.87 per cent.

Based on last year's income, Michie said the proposed rate increases would have given a 5.98 per cent return on investment. Under present operation, however, he added, this would drop to 5.39 per cent.

C. & P. did not specify why it does not desire the new rates to be based on capital investment. A PUC official said later that the Potomac Electric Power Co. rate base is 5.50 per cent of its investment, plus half of any excess earnings, while the Washington Gas Light Co. rate base is 6.00 per cent, plus half of excess earnings.

People's Lobby executive secretary March, a frequent witness at District and Congressional hearings, declared: "This commission can set a record by getting and making public the real financial status of the C. & P. Telephone Co., and recommending measures to meet its financial needs, if any, other than increasing rates."

A note of humor was added to the hearing in the closing minutes when there was no comment on Marsh's testimony. "That means," said Marsh with a smile "that my suggestions are unanimously accepted by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co."

Russell was pronounced dead from a stab wound in the chest on arrival at Casualty Hospital Sunday afternoon.

'Blue Baby,' 21, Saved

After nearly 21 years as a "blue baby," a Lovettsville, Va., youth smiled happily at John Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., following a remedial operation.

The blue coloring had fled from the fingers and lips of Nuburn Hatcher, and he was out of the oxygen tent. The delicate surgical operation, unusual for one Hatcher's age, was performed last Friday by Dr. Alfred Blalock and Dr. Helen B. Taussig.

Hatcher, despite his handicaps, graduated from Lovettsville High School in 1946 and later completed a course in welding at Manassas, Va.

Rock Island, Ill., police after checking a report that an Albert O. Rounds who answered the description of the missing man was living in that town wired Assistant United States Attorney Daniel B. Maher that there was no connection between the two men.

Rounds, heir to $1800 left him by his father in 1913, has been missing since 1913. He is sought by the office of the United States Attorney for the District in connection with litigation which would have him declared legally dead.

Would-Be Voters Warned

Governor Lane of Maryland yesterday urged all persons residing in Maryland who are not citizens to declare their intention of becoming citizens in order to qualify for next year's elections.

Under State law it is necessary for a person moving into the State to declare an intention to become a citizen a year prior to being eligible to vote.

Asks $5000 for Insult

A Washington woman yesterday asked $5000 damage for humiliation she said she suffered when a dining car steward refused to believe her son was only 9 years old and hence entitled to a junior meal at reduced prices.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Ida Smith, 324 Farragut st., nw., declared in the suit the menu on the Pennsylvania Railroad train diner offered such meals to youngsters under 10. She ordered one for her son, Stanley.

She asserted the steward questioned the boy's age and assailed her with "derisive and insulting language." She claimed his "impudent and brutal treatment" caused her "embarrassment and humiliation" and that she was unable to finish her meal.

Victims Identify Bandit

He later told Detective Sergt. Otto Fuss of the Robbery Squad that a bullet fired by the detective who was investigating a holdup at 2509 Bennings rd. ne. Thursday, just missed his head by a few inches.

Fuss said that Taylor had been released from Lorton in May on parole after serving two and half of a three-year sentence for robbery.

Brewster Opens New Inquiry Tomorrow; Forrestal Called

Over stormy Democratic protests, a Senate War Investigating committee probe of alleged top policy "waste, mismanagement and inefficiency" in mobilizing industry for World War II was announced yesterday.

Overriding objections of minority members, Chairman Owen Brewster (R., Me.) called National Defense Secretary James Forrestal to appear as first witness in the new inquiry tomorrow.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) charged Republican members with overstepping the committee's authority and an attempt "to drag Franklin Roosevelt into the 1948 campaign."

Pepper told newsmen: "They're still running against Roosevelt and trying to convict him of something."

Hatch Opposes Probe

Senator Carl Hatch (N. Mex.), another Democratic member of the group, wired Pepper of his opposition to the inquiry. Hatch also argued that the committee is exceeding authority granted it last year to investigate war "expenditures."

Brewster told reporters he has enough Republican votes to launch the war plans inquiry tomorrow. He said these other witnesses will be called in about four days of hearings:

Bernard Baruch, who mobilized industry in World War 1; Donald Nelson, former chairman of WPB; Ferdinand Eberstady, former vice chairman of WPB; Louis Johnson, former assistant Secrtary of War; Charles E. Wilson of General Electric, Arthur Hill, secretary of the National Resources Bord, and possibly former Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, jr.

Calls Pepper "Sensitive"

Brewster said the authority of the committee to investigate industrial planning for World War II is "very clear" in his opinion, both in the extension resolution and in powers voted the original (Truman) committee.

Told Pepper had called it a "political" inquiry, Brewster said:

"Senator Pepper is unduly sensitive. You can't argue motives. It would be as accurate to suggest Senator Pepper is opposing the investigation for similar reasons, but I would not suggest that."

He said arguing motives "is like arguing the right-of-way with a skunk and I don't think it's helpful." A reporter later asked if he was referring to Pepper. "Certainly not," he replied.

Brewster said the committee majority plans a thorough study of why the Government failed to take advantage of industrial mobilization plans dating back over a 20-year period.

Brewster Quotes Truman

He said the committee wanted to know "what were the consequences" of the failure to put M-Day industrial plans immediately into effect when the war started.

He quoted President Truman, former chairman of the committee, as having said failure to mobilize effectively "resulted in 18 months of lost motion."

He added that Baruch had once said thousands of lives were lost and millions of dollars wasted by failure to mobilize promptly the industrial front.

During the executive committee meeting preceding Brewster's announcement Pepper, lone Democrat present, argued Congress had some responsibility for any mobilization delays, because of failure to enact implementing legislation.

Brewster said it wasn't the committee's purpose to look into mobilization plans for World War III "but what happened in the past will be helpful. We ought to have a plan actually on the statute books."

Lining up with Brewster at yesterday's committee meeting were two other Republicans—Senators Homer Ferguson (Mich.) and George W. Malone (Nev.). Brewster said he had the proxies of three Republican absentees.

Pepper had the telegraphed proxy of Senator Hatch. Two other Democrats were absent—Senator J. Howard McGrath (R. I.), who is overseas, and Herbert R. O'Conor (Md.). Pepper said he will try to reach both for a solid party front before tomorrow's committee showdown.

No Peace in a Hungry World

Dodd Urges Mothers to Aid In Implementing Foreign Policy

Painting a vivid and comprehensive picture of hunger conditions in Europe, country by country and calorie by calorie, Undersecretary of Agriculture Norris E. Dodd yesterday urged American women to take a hand in our country's foreign policy.

"That policy is aimed at bringing decency, order, stability and peace back into the world," said Mr. Dodd, speaking at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Women's National Democratic Club, "and it cannot be done without food from the United States. It cannot be done if we all insist on lots of big, juicy corn-fed steaks, pork and lamb chops, and eggs at every meal. It cannot be done if we insist on throwing away half a loaf of bread merely because it isn't soft and fresh from the bakery.

He urged women to cooperate with the Government's program to save grain for export to Europe's hungry peoples.

"The way Mother can have an effective hand in accomplishing this important part of the United States' foreign policy," he explained, "is to buy closely, figure out ways to make tasteful meals from the less choice but nonetheless nutritious foods, and put leftovers into tempting dishes instead of into the garbage can.

"If that sounds unimportant," he declared, "remember that the figure we're shooting at is 100 million bushels of grain that we shall not be able to furnish unless you do these things. And 100 million bushels of grain is equal to a supply of about three fourths pound a day for 30 days for the 270 million persons in the 'Marshall Plan' area."

Recently returned from Geneva, where he attended the annual conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, Mr. Dodd described how crop failures, added to the destruction of war, disorganized production and distribution, have made food conditions abroad much worse than we imagine.

France has less food now than during the German occupation, he said, and England less than during the war years.

"No one produces food but farmers," concluded Mr. Dodd. "No one knows better than mother that the way to soften a man's heart is to fill his stomach . . . I do not say that merely feeding people well assures a world of decency, order and peace. But I do say that there is no real peace in a hungry world."

Britain's 'Charlie Ross'

Philip Jordan To Be Attlee's Press Adviser

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHILIP JORDAN, who has handled press relations at the British Embassy so capably this past year, is being upped to a wonderful job in England. He will be public relations adviser to the Prime Minister. As spokesman of the government he'll more or less be Clement Attlee's Charlie Ross. As Attlee is the first Prime Minister to employ a public relations adviser, Mr. J. will have no traditions to tangle with. But it will be no sinecure to build up Attlee into a publicly beloved figure.

Philip Jordan is one of Britain's crack journalists. Specializing in foreign affairs, he starred for a decade on the News Chronicle, one of the "Cocoa Press" papers, so called because it is owned by Cadbury, the chocolate manufacturer. He has written half a dozen books, the most successful being an autobiography "There Is No Return," and "Jordan's Tunis Diary," a controversial tome in which Political Adviser Bob Murphy and our North African maneuverings were severely criticized.

Ash blonde, pale, dark suited, his right eye sinisterly obliterated by a black fedora, Jordan looks like a combination cabinet minister and secret service dick. He bobs up in San Francisco at the Palace Bar, in Buenos Aires' Plaza Grill, Bucharest's Athenee Palace, a Waltz Group in Washington, or one of Tito's mountain hideouts, with equal aplomb. It will be interesting to see Mr. J. cosily ensconced in 10 Downing Street.

Preserving Historic Landmarks

LAST April some 19 different societies, all interested in preserving our country's historic and natural landmarks, met at the National Gallery of Art. There had been a preliminary meeting two months earlier and as a result of the get-together, a National Trust for Historic Preservation in the United States was tentatively set up. This week there will be follow-up meetings and the foundation is expected to "jell." The National Trust will act as coordinator, ready with financial aid to help local societies or, in emergencies, act on its own initiative.

Top man is Major General Ulysses S. Grant 3d, (retired) who is chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The foundation, says General Grant, also plans to preserve prehistoric sites and carry on archeological work. One of their most interesting tasks will be salvaging all sorts of objects from prehistoric Indian villages soon to be inundated in flood control areas. The most important sites are in South Dakota, Wyoming, and Georgia.

The foundation will ask no dues, depend on contributions. General Grant, a grandson of our great Civil War general and President, became Director of Public Buildings here in 1925. He held the job eight years; later, at President Roosevelt's insistence, he returned as chairman of the Park and Planning Commission.

It's an important position since no planning had been done since the city was originally laid out by the French Architect L'Enfant. No provision for parks or playgrounds had been made and one of commission's main chores is buying land for these purposes.

General Grant has taken on a number of civic jobs in addition to his other work, so he arises at 6.15 mornings, stays late at his office, and a long Sunday walk is his only diversion. His sister, Julia Grant, the Princess Cantacuzene-Speransky, also lives in Washington and is one of the most alertly up-to-date, charming women we know.

monte-sano's great flare

HIS TWIRL-SKIRT COAT
A WHIRLING DERVISH

JULIUS GARFINCKEL & CO. REPORTING

The tiny waist . . . the tremendous skirt — it's the phenomenal news in dresses. Here it is in a coat. The skirt swirls as you move, free as that of a whirling dervish.

The Monte-Sano flare takes many forms, takes off from different points. It springs in godets from the shoulders of flare-backs . . . is released in box pleats low on the skirts of suits . . . bursts into bloom as a knee flounce on cocoon-tight torso coats.

Monte-Sano is full of surprises. A costume looks as sedate as anything, and then you find that the coat has been concealing a suit that's a riot of plaid. You look to Monte-Sano for drama, and find it — in silhouette and in bold and unexpected combinations of color, daring but controlled.

Restraint, with this designer, can be as effective as his daring: discreet spotting of fur — hat and muff only, for example — or the staccato use of black touches. The Whirling Dervish coat is in Forstmann striped woolen, the multicolors enriched with an undertone of black, the dark note stressed by tiny black-jet buttons. Wear this coat with Persian lamb beret and muff.

At 34, Girl Has Satisfied Her Ambitions For Career and Finds Her Success Scares Men Off; She'd Trade It All for a Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ever since I finished school I have striven for success in the business world. Now I am 34 and a merchandise expert in our city. My grandmother left me a nice plot of ground on which I have built a lovely home. I have a car and loads of beautiful clothes.

I have been selfish, in the sense that my career always came first. I haven't devoted myself to others, as for instance to church or civic affairs, and I've had little time for men.

During the war, I suddenly decided I wanted a husband and started looking. I was wondering why I never got a proposal; and then an acquaintance frankly told me that I scare men off. "Men like to feel superior," she said. "You have so much, in brains, success, worldly goods, etc.; what is left for them to give you?"

Now I realize a woman is foolish to by-pass romance, marriage and motherhood for a career and I'd trade every aspect of my "success" for a good husband and baby, before it's too late—even if we had to live in a one-room apartment. But the problem is: finding that man.

Typed a Spinster In Her Small City

I COULD never get married in this town and I am thinking seriously of selling my home and car, quitting my job and moving to another city to begin again as a store clerk, as I did here. I am still young and attractive and perhaps the young floor walker in the new store would fall for me.

In any event, instead of trying to work up to an executive position I would join clubs, etc., where I can meet men; and if I don't find a husband, at least I can say I've tried. One of my close friends heartily indorses this idea; two others say I'm crazy.

It will be hard to live on a small salary again and do without my car; but I want to fall in love and marry. My parents are dead and my brother is married, so I have no ties to hold me here. There must be thousands of women who feel as I do; but lack the courage to take action. Please advise me.

C. J.

Foolish to Copy After Cinderella

DEAR C. J.: You are entitled to a husband who is at least your equal in brains and ability, so I see no sense in casting yourself in the role of Cinderella when you set forth to find the right helpmeet.

Fiddlesticks to your friend's theorem that men like to feel superior. That's an old wives' tale. The best of the modern breed don't. Rather they like to feel necessary, even as good women do; but certainly they don't construe it as a compliment to be needed primarily as a meal ticket.

However, noting the region from which you write, I realize what you're up against there; namely, a centuries-old tradition of arrogant male versus clinging-vine female pattern of social behavior, as the supposedly ideal balance in human relations. And considering your candid dynamic type, you deserve a better fate than trying to make yourself small to conform to that benighted mold, which isn't de rigeur in the larger world.

Needs to Mingle With Equal Minds

HENCE a change of milieu seems indicated, to give your robust versatile personality breathing space and bring you in contact with kindred spirits, especially men, who would speak your language, like you for yourself and take your success and possessions in stride as incidental evidence of your vitality, intelligence, grace of manner and essentially thrifty homemaker nature.

For advice: In setting your sails toward marriage, don't dispose of house and car. Keep the one as roots and the other as a convenience, in case you change jobs to establish residence in another city and happier hunting ground. Time enough when you've found the right man—as I'm sure you will—to revise property holdings.

Also, in changing jobs, don't aim at downgrading yourself to the bottom of the ladder. Rather, shove off at your present level; or fortune favoring, rise above it. Established security always attracts more of the same; and an aura of material well-being, plus the knowledge of a lovely home in the background, should enhance rather than subtract from your personal appeal and matrimonial chances in new surroundings.

M. H.

TOMORROW: Woman, 36, and man, 40, talking marriage, lock horns over her desire to quit office job and be supported. He wants a wage-earning wife.

Tact and Diplomacy May Win When Switch Discipline Fails

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

If you see a storm coming do you run to meet it or duck into shelter and wait until the worst is over?

If your marital companion gets up on the wrong side of the bed and grows angry over trivialities, do you face them boldly at the moment or wait until he—or she—calms down and you can treat them unemotionally?

Most persons would answer "yes" to both last questions. In dealing with children there would seem to be no logic in attacking an issue when it is red hot. Wait until the temperature of all concerned is cooler. No problem must be solved right at the moment it arises.

Tact Wins Battle

No matter who the child, or in what type of home, each discovers, eventually, that his whims and desires do not make the world go around. Many a problem, serious at the moment, disappears with time, though nothing is done about it. For all of these reasons it would seem that tact and diplomacy win more battles than physical weapons.

It is difficult to reason with infants. For them it is better to avoid misbehavior by removing the child from places which inspire it, or removing objects which attract destruction. If nothing works, then a period of isolation from everyone, will help him just as much as to say, "You must" and then punish him if he disobeys.

All Kinds of Discipline

Mrs. W. L. W. says her mother thinks such methods do not teach children the realities of discipline. I am afraid I do not agree. So much of what we do to prevent children from acting in dangerous or naughty ways is discipline to them. Adults think of discipline as punishment, something that hurts and makes an impression on the child. This is only part of discipline. The larger part is guidance, frustration, disapproval which changes the child's ways of acting, etc. They are all disciplines.

Suppose the child is destructive, if the object he is mishandling is taken from him that "punishes" him, doesn't it? If he runs away outdoors and is brought in the house, he has lost his liberty, hasn't he?

A parent acting in the right way, guides the child in the proper paths and prevents misbehavior whenever possible. Then, when the child is old enough, he will learn the reason why he cannot act according to his own, sweet desires.

Bad Posture May Cause Weariness

By Ida Jean Kain

Perfect figure alignment at any time is all to the good. But at no time is good posture more important than during the nine months of pregnancy. The way the mother-to-be carries herself determines the way she carries a baby.

But first, let's look into bad postures, for they become progressively worse as the baby develops. Take the woman inclined to sway-back—the exaggerated incurve at the small of the back causes an outcurve of the abdominal wall. Consequently the weight of the baby is thrown too far forward.

Don't Slump

A slumped posture isn't good either. It results in undue fatigue. With rounded shoulders, the chest caves in and the stomach protrudes . . . one curve compensates for another. An out-of-kilter posture is tiring, and particularly tiring for the woman who is carrying an extra burden.

But let's get down to cases. If you're not an expectant mother, you've probably stopped reading ere this anyway. If you are, and your posture is not as good as it might be, you will want to know if anything can be done at this time to practice better posture. Start by holding your chest up . . . actually it will help you to feel more comfortable. Holding the chest up elevates the ribs, and more important, the crowded space below the ribs. Practice holding your chest up when you are sitting, standing and walking.

Walking Best

Another all-important rule, carry your hips under. The pelvic is held in proper position by the down-and-under-pull of the buttock muscles and the up-and-in-pull of the abdominal muscles. When the pelvic girdle is carried well under, the extra weight is carried more comfortably.

The one exercise recommended during this period is walking. In fact, walking is a must. But walking in good posture is so much more effective than walking in a slumped or off-balance posture.

If you practice good posture while you're carrying the baby, and then after the baby arrives follow through with corrective exercises to restore normal tone to the overly stretched abdominal muscles, you can have a nicer figure than you did before you had the baby! Talk all this over with your own doctor.

Your Questions On Homemaking

I do a great deal of painting around the house, both inside and out. Please tell me how to take care of the paint brushes,—how to clean, how to store and what to do with them overnight when doing a big job. T. W.

These suggestions on care of paint brushes came from a man whose wife says "was born with a paint brush in his hand and has had it there ever since." He emphasized that a good brush is worth good care and here's how to do it. Wash it four to six times in varsol. Do not use turpentine because it leaves a gummy substance. Be sure to wash the heel of the brush and continue washing until the no paint residue is left in fresh versol. When clean, dry thoroughly and wrap in a dry paper. If storing for any length of time, wrap some balls in with the brushes. For overnight care or for a couple of days, do not wash but wrap in enough newspaper to support the weight of the brush and stand in a vessel in which there is a little turpentine. Paper will absorb the turpentine and keep the brush moist.

1. Is it safe to use a deodorant that is one year old?

1. If the deodorant has been kept in a closed container and so has not been allowed to become contaminated in any way, I see no reason why it should not be used.

2. What makes pumpkin filling for pie gray? I wondered if it could be the allspice? I used to make perfect pies entirely by oven. This one I tried by baking crust first, then filling with the pumpkin heated on top of stove, with egg, milk and spices.

2. The color of the pumpkin pie is due to the ingredients used, not by the method used to make it. Possibly the pumpkin was not the bright orange we enjoy seeing in our pies. Also, using milk which wasn't rich could give it a grayish appearance. Have you ever substituted undiluted evaporated milk, the unsweetened canned milk, for the milk in your recipe? This gives the pie a richness in appearance and flavor which you do not get by using fresh milk. The allspice wouldn't affect the color unless you use an unusually large amount—more than a teaspoonful.

3. Why is garlic flavor all right in dressing, but a piece eaten gives cramps?

3. Many pepole can eat garlic in pieces with no discomfort. Individuals suffering unpleasant after-effects from eating so much garlic should confine their use of this flavoring to rubbing it onto the salad bowl or putting it into the dressing.

4. Is sauerkraut juice too drastic to drink straight?

4. Sauerkraut juice taken straight should not cause a healthy, normal individual any difficulties whatsoever.

5. How long is it safe to keep raw or cooked meat in refrigerator (ordinary, not deep-freezer)? Should it be thrown away if it has slight stale odor, or a darkish spot, or may the parts not darkened be cut off and eaten—such as a piece of red beef, sort of grayish in one spot? T. K.

5. As you know, it is possible to freeze meat in an ordinary refrigerator. It will keep almost indefinitely if kept constantly frozen. However, meat frozen and kept this way must be used immediately upon thawing. If not frozen raw meat can be kept safely in the refrigerator up to three days—cooked meat possibly a day longer. This is taking for granted that the meat is placed in the coldest spot of the box, directly under the freezing unit, and is in good condition when placed here. Ground meats and poultry, not frozen, should be used within two days or less. Meat with any off odor at all should not be used. The dark spots could be due to exposure to air, for meats do become darkened on standing. The grayish appearance on red meat is caused by moisture coming in contact with the meat. Meat darkened by exposure to air or grayed by moisture contact is safe to use, provided the odor is all right.

Can you suggest any treatment for chair rockers that make ugly streaks on polished floors? I have tried sandpapering, waxing, adhesive tape and all other methods to no avail. E. L. S.

Try this to protect your floor from the chair rocker: At a dime or variety store, buy rug binding—the kind which is prepared with an adhesive substance on the back and is applied with a hot iron. Be sure the under surface of the rocker is smooth and clean, then apply this binding by placing it on the rocker and pressing it down with a hot iron. The tape should be cut just the width and length of the rocker before applying.

Coiffures Come a Cropper

New Short Hair Styles Require 'Know How' With the Scissors

ONCE again American women are cutting their hair.

But this time they're wiser than they were when the same fad caught on just after World War I. They know better now than to dash off to the nearest barber shop for a "bob." Short hair in 1948 will call for expert styling and cutting, plus a reliable permanent.

Hair cutting has become quite an art since the days of Irene Castle. There are specialists in this particular branch of hair grooming in most of Washington's top beauty salons. But their talents have been hidden in recent years by the long bob craze. A clip here and there, a bit of thinning, and their job was done. Now they are sharpening their shears in anticipation of doing a genuine "haircut" again.

What are the important requirements of a good haircut? Fred Lang, England-born hair stylist, who is manager of a beauty shop in a downtown department store, offers the following tips:

1. Don't cut your hair too short the first time. Clip it a bit and wait to see whether or not you're going to like it. You may need to get used to short hair gradually, so unless you are sure of yourself, don't have it all chopped off at once.

2. Accept the advice of the stylist whether or not to have a shingle. Mr. Lang believes that only a few women can successfully wear a close cropped hairdo. The tailored type of woman can get away with it, but ordinarily a softness at the neckline is more becoming.

3. Ask your stylist for instructions in combing short hair. This is an extremely important consideration, according to Mr. Lang. The whole object of short hair is to eliminate the need for bobby pins, hairpins, nets, etc. So it is necessary to train the hair to stay close to the head in neat lines. This can be done with proper combing.

Modern version of the "bob"—Hair is cut to a moderately short length, but not clipped at the neckline. Sides are combed forward and up, covering the ears, yet creating a soft effect around the face

Mr. Lang, whose specialty is cutting hair, believes that many women get poor haircuts to start with and never know the practical pleasure of short hair.

His theory is that hair should be tapered, rather than thinned. Tapering reduces the volume of hair without eliminating too much of it. It also allows the hair to curl.

"You would be surprised how many women discover they have curly hair after a good haircut," says Mr. Lang.

Getting the Women's Vote

Women audiences don't like so-called funny stories . . . they don't like men speakers who put their hands in their pockets . . . they don't like political speakers who lambast their opponents . . . it arouses the mother instinct in them . . .

These and other tips to political vote-seekers were stressed yesterday by Mrs. Hugh Butler, veteran Washington teacher of public speaking. Addressing the Washington Branch, American Public Relations Association, at its luncheon meeting at the Lafayette Hotel, she predicted that the party smart enough to uncork the woman vote will stand the best chance to win.

"It has been said that women talk all the time," she declared. "Well, why not give them something solid to talk about?"

Mrs. Butler pointed out that today, in spite of radio and movies, the human touch is still more in demand than ever.

One on the Aisle—

'Ideology' by James

His 1881 Story Skirts New Pit

By Richard L. Coe

IF HENRY JAMES were still alive, there's no reason why he, too, might not be called on the carpet by the Un-American Activities Committee.

His novel, "Washington Square," published in 1881, has suggested to Ruth and Augustus Goetz a play which they call "The Heiress," now in the hit class at New York's Biltmore Theater.

We saw this superbly directed play the other day, but not till we got back to Washington and those hearings, which Mary Spargo is reporting on page one, did we realize that we might have been watching something subversive.

"The Heiress" is the dull daughter of a wealthy doctor. No one wants to marry her except a charming young fortune-hunter who jilts her when she informs him that two thirds of her income will vanish because her father disapproves of him. After her father's death and with her fortune safely in her keeping, she leads the young man on only to jilt him as ruthlessly as he did her.

What concerned James was the character of people in monied circumstances. His was a miscroscopic examination of people and their behavior. While Mr. and Mrs. Goetz have set themselves an infinitely difficult task in making a dull woman seem interesting on the stage and in compressing James' leisurely story into theatrical terms, they have come off with a good show of skill.

But the real hero of "The Heiress" seems to be Jed Harris, who directed it. He has given the play some of the period style (the 1850s) which suffused the James prose. Raymond Savey's setting of the Washington Square house archives immediate effect when, as the curtain goes up, you hear the horse carriages passing outside the window. And between the writers and the director several satisfyingly theatrical scenes are achieved, which may not be James, but which do have a quality of the dramatic about them.

Exceptionally Finished Acting

The playing is exceptionally good, because everyone in the cast is fine—no sloppily played minor roles, an increasing bugaboo in the legitimate theater.

Wendy Miller, who was so fine in the film versions of "Pygmalion" and "Major Barbara," is "the heiress." She has received high praise for her work, but it seemed to us an impossible task. For Miss Miller is so essentially an attractive woman, that never for a moment did one believe she would have only one suitor. She does extremely well in the first act and makes much of the theatrical qualities of the later scenes. It is careful, resourceful but not completely successful.

Basil Rathbone is the father, a role well suited to his icy chill. He plays him forcefully and makes you believe in him, but it's a far simpler job than Miss Miller's difficult task.

The fortune-hunter is well done by Peter Cookson, also from the films, and there are craftsmanlike performances from Betty Linley (who was one of the many Vinnies of "Life with Father"), Katharine Raht (radio's Mrs. Aldrich) and the rest of the company.

The Little Red Bugs

But, as we said, it could be that this study of human beings under the impact of money and lack of it, is really a subversive attack on the evils of inherited wealth.

For Dr. Austin Sloper and his daughter, Catherine, could be said to be as worthless as some of the rich villains whose appearance in movie scripts appear to have lost some screen writers their jobs.

And once you get started on this idea of villainies on stage or screen you can only go on and on. There's no stopping. If you look for them, the little red bugs of subversive activities can be seen everywhere. Those Cinderella roles of Deanna Durbin and the rambunctious derring-do of Donald Duck could be viewed as deep-dyed plots from Moscow.

"SPIRIT OF WEST POINT," the "Doc" Blanchard-Glenn Davis picture, arrives Thursday on the Metropolitan screen, described as "the life story of the boys, singularly, and their days together at the Point." The girl with them is Anne Nagel, who plays the wife of Coach "Red" Blaik

West Point Film Concerns Hazing

Hollywood.—Harold Vermilyea, the outstanding Broadway actor who is becoming as well known on the screen as he is on the stage, recently was assigned a top "heavy" role in Paramount's "The Long Gray Line," which costars Alan Ladd and Donna Reed.

Vermilyea will play the part of the industrialist who brings charges against Ladd for hazing his son at West Point. The subsequent investigation is the focal point of this exciting drama against the background of the United States Military Academy.

Signed by Paramount from Broadway while he was appearing successfully in "Deep Are the Roots," Vermilyea has played important roles in "O. S. S," "The Emperor Waltz" and "The Big Clock."

Early Start

Hollywood.— Phyllis Calvert, who costars with Melvyn Douglas in "My Own True Love," made her stage debut at the age of 10 in a London play with the great Ellen Terry.

Prophecy Comes True

Hollywood.—In 1942 both Alan Ladd and Donna Reed were voted "Stars of Tomorrow" in a national poll. Today they're costarred in "The Long Gray Line," exciting drama of West Point.

Russia Rejects U. S. Proposal On Taking Troops From Korea

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Russia today rejected an American plan for withdrawal of troops in Korea after establishment of a government as being similar to British methods in setting up a "Rightist" government for Greece.

"Really, bad examples are infectious," Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, told the United Nations General Assembly.

His curt dismissal of Secretary Marshall's proposal was contained in three paragraphs of a 10,000-word tirade against the American-sponsored Balkan commission to watch over the guerilla fighting in northern Greece.

Avoids Troop Commitment

In answer to the hot words, Herschel Johnson again pledged to the Assembly that the United States would join in any action recommended by the United Nations to meet a "challenge" against Greek independence from her three communist-dominated neighbors. He carefully refrained from indicating that American troops would be sent. But he made it clear that no action would be taken by the United States without United Nations approval.

Vishinsky's words presaged a fight on another of Secretary Marshall's four "vital" actions recommended to the Assembly last month. Russia thus indicated its complete rejection of all four—action on Greece, a "Little Assembly," Korea and limitation of the veto.

The Greek elections of 1946, said Vishinsky, resulted in only half the electorate registering their choice because of the support given to "reactionary" candidates by the British army.

"Now the experience of holding such 'democratic' elections in Greece under the supervision of foreign troops inspires Mr. Marshall in regard to Korea," he declared.

"In other words, the American Government is determined to hold elections in Korea on the Greek model under the cover of its armed forces."

Under U. N. Supervision

The American plan presented Friday provides for withdrawal of United States and Russian troops only after establishment of an elective government for Korea under supervision of a United Nations commission. Russia, which dominates the north of that country and its flourishing Comunist adherents, has proposed immediate withdrawal of all troops.

Herschel Johnson declared that if a special Assembly is convened as a result of aggression discovered by the Balkan commission, the United States "would be prepared to cooperate with other members of the United Nations in putting into effect whatever measures are recommended by the Assembly for the protection of Greece."

"What the United States is doing in Greece," he said, "is directed toward upholding the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations. The specific problem before us is one which can be solved best by united action. It offers to the United Nations both a challenge and anopportunity.

"My government pledges itself to join with its fellow members in meeting this challenge and improving this opportunity."

Elephant Gets Its Hooks Into Ike, But Not GOPs'

By The Associated Press

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower hooked up with an elephant last night—but it had nothing to do with the Republican Party.

It came in the form of Denmark's highest decoration — the Order of Knight of the Elephant—awarded to the United States Chief of Staff at a Danish Embassy dinner.

Embassy officials said the diamond-encrusted medal, one of the oldest decorations in the world, is usually awarded only to princes of royal blood. They said the knighthood title of "sir" does not go with it, however, and so it will not conflict with regulations barring Americans from accepting foreign titles.

Soviet General In Berlin Scorns Protest by U. S.

Berlin, Oct. 20 (U.P.). — Marshal Vassili Sokolovsky, Soviet military governor, today rejected an American protest against a public criticism of the United States by a Soviet colonel.

Col. Sergei Tulpanov, Russian propaganda chief had alleged in a speech that American monopoly capitalists were seeking to gain control of western Germany to use it as a springboard for an attack on Russia.

Paratroopers Rescue Missionary in Arctic

Churchill, Man., Oct. 20 (U.P.).—A radio message revealed today how a Canadian paratroop rescue group, after an 800-foot drop among rugged ice-caps, had reached a wounded Anglican missionary near isolated Moffet Inlet, 75 miles south of Arctic Bay.

Capt. Guy D'Artois, in charge of the rescue party which made its drop 15 days ago, reported that Canon John H. Turner's condition was "quite good." He was wounded when a rifle was discharged accidentally.

Gum Springs Trash Man Held in Killing

Willie Jerden, 37, of Gum Springs in Fairfax County, was charged yesterday by Fairfax police with the October 8 murder of Edmond C. Proctor, a 27-year-old Gum Springs laborer.

Fairfax police Jerden, a trash collector working for himself, signed a confession, stating he shot Proctor and then left him in the woods to die.

He is being held, Chief Carl McIntosh said, under $10,000 bond, awaiting a preliminary hearing. He claimed, Detective Sergt. Cecil E. Brown who took the confession said, he shot Proctor in self-defense during an argument following a drinking session. The argument, police said, concerned a coat Jerden thought Proctor had stolen.

Proctor's body was found Saturday by a group of Proctor's neighbors who had searched the area for a week. The body, badly decomposed, was found in a shallow grave near Fort Hunt rd.

Fund Drive Proposed to Va. Methodists

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—A recommendation for building funds aggregating $575,000 for three Methodist institutions was put before the Virginia conference this afternoon by N. D. Sills of Richmond, chairman of the group's Commission of World Service and Finance.

The conference was asked to approve a fund campaign like that used for the Crusade for Christ, including $500,000 to modernize and build additional structures at the Methodist Orphanage in Richmond, $25,000 for Ferrum Vocational School and College, and $50,000 for a new sanctuary for Whisner Memorial Methodist Church, Blacksburg—about 50 per cent of its present value.

The delegates approved the budget report of the commission which included apportionments for general conference and conference work, also presented by Mr. Sills.

Four ballots for clerical delegates to the jurisdictional conference in Columbia, S. C., June 30, 1948, were completed with the following ministers elected:

The first reserve delegate for the laymen was N. D. Sills. Others named were M. H. Beales, Boydton; G. T. Elliott, Hampton; and Mrs. J. A. B. Lowry of Farmville.

The Rev. William Shelby Gardner was readmitted to the conference.

An invitation read by Dr. Frank L. Wells of Norfolk for the next annual conference to meet there was carried.

Duchess in Line For Warfield Estate Share

Towson, Md., Oct. 20 (AP).—The Duchess of Windsor, the former Wallace Warfield of Baltimore, may eventually share in the estate of an uncle who died recently.

The will of Gen. Henry M. Warfield, former Maryland adjutant general and public figure, was filed today in Orphans Court with the estate valued in excess of $850,000.

The entire estate, with the exception of small grants to business associates and household employes, was left in trust for his widow. After her death it will remain in trust from which the net proceeds will be paid to his daughter, Mrs. Anita Warfield Lewis, for life.

The trusteeship will continue after the death of Mrs. Lewis, and the will directs the trustees to pay out several annuities and bequests to relatives including $15,000 to the duchess.

Commuter Train Jumps Track

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP).—A spokesman for the Western Maryland Railway said no injuries resulted when a commuter train from Union Bridge was derailed in Baltimore early today.

There were about 150 passengers aboard the three-car train.

Pennsylvania Railroad officials said no through traffic—either passenger or freight—was hampered by the wreck, but the Pennsylvania and Western Maryland roads each rerouted one train arriving in Baltimore.

An estimated 150 feet of track was damaged when the Western Maryland locomotive and a combination mail and passenger coach left the rails. The mishap occurred the northern end of Pennsylvania Station.

Shipyard Workers Returning to Jobs

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP).—Between 3600 and 3700 employes have returned to duty since a back-to-work movement began September 5 at the Key Highway shipyard of the Bethlehem Steel Co., a spokesman for the firm stated today.

The company said the normal staff is approximately 6000, and that returnees include 45 shop stewards of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (CIO), which called the walkout about three and a half months ago.

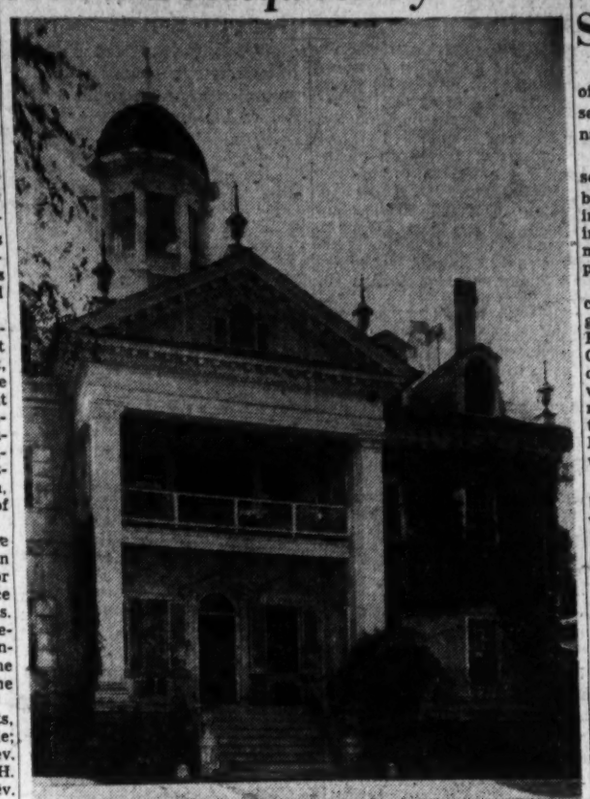
Hampton, Famed Md. Mansion Soon to Be Acquired by U. S.



150 YEARS IN ONE FAMILY—Hampton, famed Georgian mansion near Towson, Md., soon will become Government property after a century and a half of ownership by the Ridgely family. Gift of the Andrew Mellon family to the National Park Service, the mansion and 40-acre estate will be maintained and kept open to the public by the Maryland Society for the Preservation of Antiquities

Historic Hampton, one of the finest Georgian mansions in the United States, will soon belong to the people of the United States.

The National Park Service is acquiring the home, built by Capt. Charles Ridgely between 1783 and 1790, and its 40-acre grounds near Towson, Md., by gift from the Avalon Foundation, a charitable trust founded by Mrs. Ailsa M. Bruce, daughter of the late Andrew W. Mellon.

Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug said the Park Service would hold the estate for the public, while the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities will have charge o fexhibitin git.

"Few historic houses in the United States were built on such a magnificent scale," said Krug. "It represents the height of opulence in the period just after the Revolution, and has been preserved intact."

John Ridgely, great-great grandnephew of the builder of Hampton, in whose family the property has been held continuously since the Revolution, is transferring the mansion to the United States for a sum "well below market value," according to Krug.

Robert Garrett of Baltimore, president of the Maryland Society, believes the grea tmansion will become a major historical objective in the area for visitors from all parts of the country. After repairs by the National Park Service, its operation and maintenance will not be an expense to the Federal Government, and will be one of the Society's most important undertakings.

Captain Ridgely fought with distinction in the Revolutionary War and was a member of the Maryland House of Burgesses from 1773 to 1789. He was on the committee appointed to frame the State Constitution.

Report on Va. Alcoholics Asks Central Farm, Clinics

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—A legislative debate over Virginia's responsibility for treating chronic alcoholics was in prospect today, as Governor Tuck's office received a 6-2 report from members of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council on the inebriety problem an dthe best means of meeting it.

A majority of the council members held out in a report to the Governor for a long range program with these main features: The establishment of a central farm, preferably on the Petersburg State Colony property which will be vacated when that institution moves to a new location at Elko, the establishment of five regional clinics, and the formation of a division of rehabilitation within the State Hospital Board.

Two members of the VALC dissented, however. Delegate E. Blackburn Moore of Berryville, regarded as one of the most influential administration spokesmen in the House, and Senator J. D. Hagood of Clover, declared that "whatever the merits of the program outlined in the report may be, we think it would be unwise for the State to branch out into this activity while there is so much need for improvement in the various activities to which the State is already committed."

The majority's report did not contain a clear picture of the cost of the State of the proposed program.

Meanwhile the State General Assembly was urged to provide aid to Virginia localities wherever needed to carry on the construction of medical facilities under the provisions of the Hill-Burton Act by the Virginia Council of Health and Medical Care which met here today. The resolution was passed by a delegation of almost 100 Virginians who are interested in improving health facilities for the State.

Hospital Contract Protested in Virginia

Newport News, Va., Oct. 20 (AP). A protest over the award of a contract for a building project at the new Eastern State Hospital near Williamsburg today was sent to Governor Tuck, charging that public bids were not posted.

The Peninsula Builders Exchange said several local builders were qualified to bid on the project but that no advertisements for bids were made.

Exchange officials pointed particularly to a project which included a power house, sewage disposal plant, patients' and employes' buildings and roads.

79 Selected For D. C. Food Saving Group

James E. Colliflower, chairman of the District Citizens Food Conservation Committee, yesterday named a 79-member committee.

Colliflower also disclosed that several letters have been received by his aides in the District Building committee headquarters offering suggestions on how to implement the national food saving campaign.

In addition, the committee received an extensive list of suggestions from the National Citizens Food Committee, headed by Charles Luckman. These, plus others advanced by committeemen, will be considered at an opening meeting Thursday at 3:30 p. m. in the board room of the District Building.

Women to Staff Office

One of the first offers of aid to be accepted was one made by women members of the Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, who volunteered to staff the office, which has been located in Room 507, Colliflower said.

Colliflower also announced that P. Y. K. Howat, first vice president of the Washington Board of Trade, will be executive vice chairman of the food committee.

The Washington Ethical Society suggested that District residents plan for "We-Care" meals on Thanksgiving Day, using only economical and plentiful foods, and donating the difference in cost from the usual bountiful meal to foreign relief.

Roanoke Is Ordered To Restate Its Suit

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—A three-judge annexation court ruled in effect today that the City of Roanoke must restate its entire case against Roanoke County in its attempt to annex some 22 square miles of land.

The court upheld objections filed by the town of Vinton and the county against the form used in publishing of the notice and the ordinance. The notice read "County of Roanoke vs. City of Roanoke" instead of vice versa.

After the court's order, City Attorney C. E. Hunter said the city would reinstitute proceedings.

Va. Baptist Group To Hear Dr. Johnson

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, president of the Baptist World Alliance Congress, will address the 124th annual session of the Baptist General Association of Virginia next month.

The convention will be held at the first Baptist Church here November 5, 6 and 7. The Congress represents 1195 Baptist churches.

Grin and Bear It

"But how can we expect revolution, comrades, when half the radio programs are busy redistributing the wealth . . ."

Britons Doing Output Share, Envoy Replies

St. Louis, Oct. 20 (AP).—Britain's Ambassador hit back today at "a widespread impression" that Britons "are not doing enough, that we are sitting back on our hands with our mouths wide open waiting for you to fill them."

"This is not so," Lord Inverchapel said at the opening of the National Foreign Trade convention.

"Whilst indeed we received large credits from you and the Canadians, we have paid out to Europe and war-shattered areas of the East some three billion dollars.

"This sum, measured on the basis of national wealth, is equivalent to some 14 or 15 billion dollars paid out by you."

Lord Inverchapel declared "we have done more than our full share" in trying to "restore the system of multilateral trading in the world."

Cites Production Data

He cited as postwar production accomplishments in England "the rapid revival of our merchant marine" and production at the present time of "75 per cent more trucks, 55 per cent more rayon yarn, 26 per cent more steel, 45 per cent more gas and 67 per cent more electricity than we did in 1938."

"In almost all directions, with exception of coal and cotton, we are far ahead," the Ambassador said.

Himself a sheepman of the Scottish highlands, Inverchapel digressed amusingly to speak of the way men talk, no matter how similarly they farm.

"Like most farmers all the world over," he said, "we in Scotland have an idiom of our own when we speak of our trade. In this country whereas you tend to call a ram a buck, in mine we tend for instance to call him a tup and so we get the terms tup-lamb and tup-hog. Now in my country a hog is not inevitably a hog as you understand it. A hog makes mutton and not bacon. It is a young sheep from the time it stops being a lamb, indeed after its weaning, until its first shearing.

"Then, strangely enough, the female, the she hog, becomes what we call a gimmer and so remains until she becomes a ewe. But if after the tupping she is unfruitful she reverts to being what we call a yill-gimmer—a slightly ignoble status in any sheep world, where motherhood is highly prized.

"And now to turn to the young males. The tup-hog tends, if he is not a super hog, to become a dinment, which is what we call a wether, and to find his way pretty quickly to the butcher after the first shearing. If he is a very distinguished young sheep, he is promoted to the full rank of tup or buck."

U. S. Exports in Slump

American exports, at a record high in May, are still "relatively low" when compared with the "tremendous increase in our productive capacity," David K. E. Bruce, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said in another address.

Industrial production is 35 per cent above the 1935-39 average level, Bruce said. Exports the first six months of 1947 were at the record annual rate of 15.2 billion dollars, but amounted to only 12.7 per cent of the total of all movable goods we produced, he said.

This compared with 16.5 per cent in 1920, another postwar year.

Bruce told 1500 delegates registered for the convention sponsored by the National Foreign Trade Council, Inc.:

"Our imports are exceedingly low, both in terms of supplying dollars to our customers in other countries and in supplying us with materials we need to support our high levels of production."

Robert L. Garner, vice president and general manager of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, said that under the Marshall Plan:

"It is essential that the assistance rendered be not too little, but that, also, it not be so much as to relieve Europe of making its own maximum effort."

Thomas H. McKittrick, vice president of the Chase National Bank of New York, said the Marshall Plan must assure that the "friendly aid" given be used to secure full production, stable prices, stable money and equitable wages.

Garner said much of Europe's plight could be traced to a "deep and virulent division, with the Soviet bloc in opposition and hostile to almost every effort which is being made outside its area to rebuild productivity, trade and stability."

2 Are Drowned As Barge Rams Yacht in Va.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—Two of three persons aboard the 40-foot yacht Lone Star lost their lives early today when their vessel, anchored off the Army base, was rammed and sunk by an oil barge.

Mrs. Frances Girard of Jacksonville, Fla., and Crewman Dick Bard, New York, N. Y., went down with the yacht, which sank seconds after the collision.

A. H. Girard, husband of Mrs. Girard and owner of the yacht, was rescued by Barge Captain J. Miller Haldeman, of Bowers, Del., who jumped overboard and hauled him to safety. Girard's condition was reported good at the U. S. Marine hospital, where he was admitted for treatment of shock.

Haldeman said Girard told him he had anchored the yacht just outside the channel. The Lone Star was en route from Long Island to Florida. The oil barge was in tow of the tug Pocahontas, which was lashed to its starboard side aft.

Naval and Coast Guard vessels joined the pocahontas in a search for possible survivors. The bodies of Mrs. Girard and Bard have not been recovered.

Cabin John P-TA to Meet

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Of Penny Banks and Penmen

The other day we pondered Captain Alexander's question as to what had happened to the old-fashioned penny bank.

Joseph H. Healy of 3023 14th st. nw. says that the Columbia Federal Savings and Loan Association still carries several types of coin banks, and distributes them to promote the habit of thrift—not only among children, but among grownups, too.

William D. Macy 3d of 2803 Que st. nw. says he can't help us on the penny bank problem, but does have a pertinent question of his own.

Bill served under Captain Alexander during the war, and says:

"I received most of my orders from him via scraps of newspaper, wrapping paper, used envelopes, etc., all written in longhand.

"After years of association, it became possible for me to decipher (after concentrated attention) at least 10 per cent of Captain Alexander's orders. I therefore came to consider myself an exceptional personage.

"My curiosity prompts me to inquire whether you have had decoding experience, or has Captain Alexander taken to using a typewriter?"

District Liners are the nicest people and the worst penmen in the world. The decoding experience they've given me in the past few months made Captain Alexander's letter easy as pie.

You should see some of the tough ones.

ADD NAMES

The headlines tell us that "Colliflower Will Head Citizens' Food Committee."

Can you beet it?

NO 'CUFFS, OFFICER: I'LL GO QUIETLY

Assistant Superintendent of Police Milton D. Smith has booked me on a charge of inaccuracy.

In speaking of the building at 6th and the Avenue where passengers "used to board trains," I appear to have booted one.

Inspector Smith recalls that 6th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. was the site of the ticket office; the trains were boarded one block down 6th st., where the National Gallery of Art now stands.

That was the station where President Garfield was shot—and you might know that a policeman would remember it.

EVER, EVERY

Charles C. Hughes of 704 S. Orme st., Arlington, Va., is puzzled by the expression "every so often"—especially in the new song which bears that name.

District Liner Hughes says his dictionary defines "every" as meaning "each one." So what's the sense to "every so often?" Should it be "ever" instead?

I dunno, Chas. Why don't we just stick to the old song, "Once in a While"?

SOLUTION

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Beesley of the Dorchester House dropped around the other night to catch "Post Preview." When it was over Tom said, "C'mon, I'll buy you a cup of coffee."

"Sorry," I replied, "but I've got to stay here and work. Look at this pile of mail. I haven't even been able to open it yet."

The next day a messenger brought me a plastic letter-opener and a note which read:

"Your troubles are over. Now you can open your mail."

TONGUE TWISTERS

Mrs. E. A. A. of Landover Hills, Md., says.

"Don't you dare use my name with this or everybody will kid me about it, but the other day when my son came clomping down the stairs I told him he sounded like a hoard of hearses."

I know how you feel. I recall the embarrassment of the announcer who introduced the former President to a radio audience as: "Mr. Hoobert Herver."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

And stay away from apples
'Cause you might eat a worm.

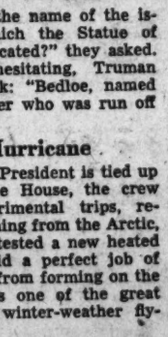
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman Is Pioneer In Gadgets for Planes

By Drew Pearson

Howard Hughes has an unexpected amateur rival in the field of air pioneering—the President of the United States. It is not generally known, but President Truman takes a personal interest in helping to develop new gadgets for the airlines, and has converted his private plane, the Independence, into a flying laboratory for testing these devices.



Col. Myers

The man who actually does the work on these new gadgets is Truman's pilot, Lieut. Col. Henry Myers. Myers, however, pays tribute to the President's keen interest and says he is frequently called into the White House to report. In the air, Truman's favorite spot in the plane is the co-pilot's seat, though he never touches the controls.

"Don't you fool with politics," he once told Myers, "and I won't fool with flying."

Instead, the President sometimes does his own navigating. As an artillery captain in the First World War, he learned to read maps, and he also possesses an intimate knowledge of the United States. The plane's crew has made a game of testing the President's geography. Last trip they dug up a question from a radio quiz they were sure would stump him.

"What is the name of the island on which the Statue of Liberty is located?" they asked.

Without hesitating, Truman snapped back: "Bedloe, named after a farmer who was run off the island."

Flew in Hurricane

When the President is tied up in the White House, the crew makes experimental trips, recently returning from the Arctic, where they tested a new heated wing. It did a perfect job of keeping ice from forming on the wing, always one of the great dangers of winter-weather flying.

Unknown to the public, the President's plane also flew into the Florida hurricane after it had lashed inland and lost some of its strength. Colonel Myers wanted to try his new "picture radar" which faithfully registered the swirling, moist winds.

This radar wasn't functioning properly when the President flew to Brazil recently, and when he got back, he summoned Myers to find out how it had been fixed and what its new capabilities were.

The improvements, tested on the President's plane, have now been accepted by commercial airlines:

1. The plane has reversing propellers. An interlock on the landing gear kept these from spinning the wrong way in flight. Myers moved the interlock up to the nose gear, since this is the last to touch the ground, giving him more control over the reverse spinning.

2. The plane's radar was shifted to the nose where it gives complete forward coverage and scans upward. There were also technical improvements.

3. The President's pressurized cabin was improved technically. The plane can now fly at 20,000 feet with the same inside pressure found at 8000 feet.

Real Estate Row

The House-Senate Housing Committee, supposed to be busy probing the reasons why veterans who lived in foxholes now have to live with mothers-in-law, was scheduled to hold its first full-dress meeting two weeks ago. But most mysteriously, the meeting was called off.

The chairman, GOP Representative Ralph Gamble of New York, gave a very fishy excuse, namely that Congress might be called back into special session and the meeting could be held then.

However, here is the real, inside reason for Gamble's hasty retreat.

Bombastic Joe McCarthy, the freshman Senator from Wisconsin, who is the real boss of Chairman Gamble, feared that his stooge-chairman might be deposed. If the full Housing Committee were called into session, McCarthy suspected it might rebel at the way Gamble was elected at a star-chamber session back in August.

GOP Senator Ralph Flanders of Vermont and Democrats Robert Wagner of New York and Glen Taylor of Idaho, together with Democratic Representative Albert Rains of Alabama, are furious at McCarthy for blocking their proxies at the August meeting. All four had sent in their votes for conscientious Republican Senator Charles Tobey of New Hampshire to be housing chairman, but McCarthy threw out their proxies.

So when the full committee was scheduled to meet October 1, Tobey supporters were all set to demand another vote. And they would have won—a very bad blow to the cocky freshman from Wisconsin. For Tobey, unlike McCarthy, is an unrelenting foe of the real estate lobby.

That was why the October housing hearing suddenly was called off.

Note—However, what McCarthy didn't know was that Senator Tobey had his mind made up gracefully to refuse the chairmanship. He planned to permit Congressman Gamble to remain the nominal head man of the committee.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
